the fire, were completely destroyed, their metal bodies and framework distorted by the heat. They had been parked in the alleyway in the center of the building.

Recent Building.
Half the building, the main part of which had been erected in March, 1933, had only been recently completed, and was left standing with the east side badly damaged. It had partially protected the corrugated iron buildings of the Standard Oil Co. plant, which stood only 80 feet from the blaze, and contained the company's equipment and tanks.

During the heat of the fire, workmen said, the metal roofs were unbearably hot, and sent clouds of steam into the air when sprayed with water.

The saw mill, factory and lumber yard of the Timber Products Co., remained unharmed, although within 100 feet of the blaze. The only other structure damaged was the brick Mill Service Station east of the fire, its wooden window and door frames and adjoining garage having caught fire.

Alarm at 4:15.
The alarm was received by the fire department at approximately 4:15, having been turned in both by the night watchman and by Frank Smith, an employe of Beck's bakery, who passed by soon after the fire broke out. The night watchman had been through the entire building immediately before, and had punched the watchman's clock at 4 a. m. Soon after he returned toward the front of the building and saw the blaze breaking out in the front offices, near the vault and near a sawdust burner. Without waiting for further examination, the watchman ran to the telephone and sent in the alarm.

Although on the scene less than five minutes later, firemen were unable to penetrate the flames to remove any property, but succeeded in passing water lines between the fire and the Standard Oil Co. buildings. The water was concentrated at first upon a gasoline pump at the edge of the building and underground tank containing several hundred gallons of fuel, and water was later played upon the entire building, but the blaze was then far beyond control. Manager Hart and other officials strongly complimented the fire department for preventing spread of the fire.

Origin Is Mystery.
Authorities expressed no opinion that the blaze had started from the sawdust burner, nor believed that electric wiring was responsible. A thorough investigation was planned today, but little evidence of the cause had as yet been discovered.

Valuable papers and cash belonging to the company was believed to be undamaged within the vault, which stands in the debris practically intact. Although it was still too hot this noon, authorities were planning to open the vault today. Nearly all employes of the company turned out to fight the fire, manning the equipment on the property. They succeeded in moving several thousand feet of lumber away from the walls of the building, outside.

Wires Removed.
Copco officials were on the scene almost as soon as the fire department arrived, and removed power lines leading to the sawmill, which were to be replaced today.

The blaze, towering many feet into the air, attracted scores of townspeople despite the early hour, and others watched the progress of the fire from their homes. Although comparatively still when the fire started, a light wind sprang up later in the morning which aided in keeping the flames away from the closest buildings.

Contrary to rumors, the Ashland fire department was not called, and the Medford force had one truck still in reserve at the fire hall, after sounding the first and general alarms.

Rialto Stars

Enacted amidst the colorful surroundings of a copra plantation in the Dutch East Indies, "Pursued," described as a love drama of the tropics, packed with thrills, opens tomorrow at the Rialto theater. In the cast are Rosemary Ames, Victor Jory, Pert Kelton and Russell Hardi, with George Irving and Torben Meyer in support.

Based on a story by Larry Evans, "Pursued" chronicles the romance of a lovely cafe entertainer and a man who goes to Borneo to take charge of a plantation. A scheming and jealous half-caste, the role played by Jory, provides the barrier in the course of true love.

ASHLAND MEN IN JAIL ON CHARGE OF INCENDIARISM

George High lived at Astoria for several years, Robert High is a former resident of Seattle.

Local authorities yesterday were in telephone communication with an uncle residing in California, who preferred assistance to his kin. The brothers are endeavoring to retain Attorney George M. Roberts as counsel. Attorney Roberts is out of the city, and is expected to return today. Up to noon they had not retained counsel, due to waiting for Attorney Roberts' return.

The state police investigators have been working on the case for 18 months. The arrest came as a surprise.

Helen Hayes Stars In Craterian Drama

After an absence of more than a year, Helen Hayes has returned to the screen to score another great personal triumph.

Her latest picture, "What Every Woman Knows," the famous romance by Sir James Barrie, opened yesterday at the Craterian theater.

Surpassing all her previous efforts, Miss Hayes has achieved a new strength in emotional portrayals. Her appeal seems to reach out from the screen to actually stir the spectator in sympathy with the character she plays. Intensity and a firm belief in the motives of the story are evident in her every action.

Madge Evans makes a departure from the unsophisticated young ingenue roles she has played recently to portray Lady Sibyl, destined young aristocrat.

Others in the noteworthy cast include Lucille Watson, Dudley Digges, Donald Crisp and David Torrence.

On the same program, the Craterian is showing a two-reel musical called "La Cucaracha," beautifully photographed in technicolor, and certainly one of the most dazzling short subjects ever produced. Successfully combining singing, dancing, comedy and drama, "La Cucaracha" forms 20 minutes of dynamic rhythm and action.
