Craterian Star

A new favorite and a new name come to the screen in "Anne of Green Gables," coming Sunday to the Craterian theater.

Anne Shirley is the heroine in the film, played by Anne Shirley. The name was adopted by the actress when she won the role that hundreds of other Hollywood girls had sought.

Formerly known as Dawn O'Day, the new Anne Shirley is 16 years old. Despite her youth, she is a screen veteran, having made her debut before the cameras at the age of three. She has since supported herself and her mother from her motion picture earnings.

"Anne of Green Gables," as millions of readers will recall, is the story of an orphan girl who is adopted by a middle-aged farm couple. It depicts the struggle of the child in winning the hearts of the disappointed man and woman, who had expected the orphanage to send them a boy, and it traces the romance which ensues as the girl blossoms into young womanhood. First published in 1908, the novel, by L. M. Montgomery, has won recognition as a classic of fiction.

In Comedy Mystery

Secret panels, sliding doors, invisible microphones and disappearing rooms — tricks of leggederman that would make Houdini look like an amateur come to the screen in "Murder in the Private Car," comedy-mystery thriller, now at the studio theater.

Charlie Buggles and Una Merkel are featured. It is a thrilling story crammed with laughs. The picture tells of the murderous attacks made on a young belle, and her rescue by a comedy deflector of crime.
