

FIGHT BREWS ON COLUMBIA POWER AUTHORITY PLAN

Regional Planning Conference Told Low Dam at Grand Coulee Will Not Aid in Irrigation Supply

SEATTLE, Dec. 14.—(AP)—A fight was brewing here today over proposed creation of a Columbia valley authority, for power and other development of the basin, as the second Pacific northwest regional planning conference neared adjournment.

Lieut. Col. Thomas M. Robins, war department division engineer at Portland, chairman of the conference, later revealed that the division recommendation to the conference will include no mention of a CVA and will state that:

Relief Only Reason

"Justification for any construction work at Grand Coulee at this time lies only in the relief of unemployment and long range anticipation of future needs.

"Under the circumstances, it is believed that the public interest would be better served by undertaking, at this time, construction of a high dam—power installations to be added later as warranted by growth in market, rather than building a low dam primarily for power production.

"A low dam now under construction at Coulee will not be useful for irrigation, and it is questionable whether the power developed at this dam can be marketed within a reasonable period of time."

Dana Peacemaker

Dana was busy today pouring oil on troubled waters that "the CVA would not be the same as the Tennessee valley authority."

But W. B. D. Dodson, executive vice president of the Portland chamber of commerce, told the Associated Press that "we are against having Bonneville overburdened artificially. We want to know just what this CVA will be and how it will administer the projects."

"We are going to have to center our every energy on bringing new industries here to use the power. We are against having Bonneville handicapped."

He said the same fears cause Oregonians to be loath to vote approval to Dana's other major recommendation for construction of a high dam at Coulee.

Sees Dictator Danger

Discussing "the philosophy of land planning," Dr. Alfred T. Atkinson, president of the State College of Montana at Bozeman, said:

"Settlers in the past could make mistakes in use of land—and land includes trees and water—but they didn't have to live with their mistakes. They had the alternative of new lands to go to. They didn't need PWA's and CVA's."

"But today we do not have that and other alternatives. Hence the government of this country and of European countries have gone to collectivism. The danger of this is sliding over to a dictatorship."

"It works a lot better under a dictator, if you don't mind the price you pay in liberty. So, in this country, we have written-in the voluntary sign-up in our collectivism. We have 'free collectivism'."

May Mean New Party

But free collectivism cannot flourish. If this country does not recover to a point where there is a pretty reasonable indication of employment and prosperity by 1936, there is apt to be a party which says: "Why, we'll make them do it."

"Mr. Huey Long probably will lead it."

Dr. Atkinson wants that "we just can't make too many mistakes. Too much dissatisfaction, too much insecurity are dangerous. We can't make too many mistakes in free col-lectivism and still retain our present form of government."

He quoted Henry Wallace, secretary of agriculture, as writing that "human beings are ruining the land, and the land is ruining human beings."

V. B. Stanbery, Oregon state planning consultant, told the state and local government group that planning councils must take pains to make their state development plans flexible and continuing and "with a negative value of preventing mistakes."

The conference was scheduled to end late today.

CULINARY CRAFT....

By Estella Dorgan, Director, Home Service, The California Oregon Power Company

Holiday Canapes

Holiday canapes are likely to make their appearance at holiday feasts, therefore, introductions are in order. That's what canapes do gracefully—tempt the appetite and put it in the mood to welcome the dinner to follow.

Canapes have a foundation of white, brown, rye, nut or fruit bread. Usually they are cut thin and shaped in the design appropriate for the occasion. At Christmas time, a star cutter. Cover with creamed cheese, staked a light green. Decorate with strips of pimiento radiating from the center to the points of the star. Place a tiny star in the center and sprinkle all with very finely chopped parsley. Jelly Bits.

Estella Dorgan

Fry in butter until delicately browned. Cool, then place tiny mounds of different colored jelly on each canape. Mint (green) and currant (red) would be a good combination for some of them just now.

Spread rounds of bread with mayonnaise. Arrange two shrimp on each round, making a circle and filling it with mayonnaise. Sprinkle with paprika.

Tomato.
Fry rounds of bread in butter to a nice brown. Spread with mayonnaise and place a thin slice of tomato on this. Spread with horseradish and place a slice of stuffed olive in the center.

Anchovy.
Toast bread, spread with anchovy paste and sprinkle with finely chopped pickle.

Chicken.
Spread bread with mayonnaise. Cover with finely chopped chicken. In the center then place a small amount of stiff cranberry jelly.

Fry bread or toast it and then butter it lightly. Place a ring of tax white of a hard-cooked egg in the center of the canape. Fill with highly seasoned yolk or a fish paste. Decorate with chopped pimiento.
