EAGLES PRESIDENT TO VISIT MEDFORD ON NATIONAL TOUR

Grand Worthy President George F. Douglas of the Fraternal Order of Eagles will be a visitor in Medford February 9, it was announced this morning by A. H. Banwell, president of the local acie. News of the visit of the Eagles' head was received from Conrad H. Mann, managing organizer of the order.

Upon receipt of the information, Banwell issued the following statement:

"Medford is certainly very fortunate to be honored with a visit from the grand worthy president, particularly so as it is my understanding that on his trip throughout the United States he will only visit two cities in each state. His visit is not merely one of interest to Eagles, but to everyone in the community, because as president of the organization of practically three quarters of a million men, he will have a message of vital interest to everyone."

Definite arrangements for the entertainment of the distinguished guest will be made directly it is known when he will arrive and the length of his stay in Medford. His appearance here will attract members of the order from all over southern Oregon and undoubtedly he will make a public address during the day, covering those matters in which the fraternal order is vitally interested, which include workmen's compensation, mother's compensation, old age pension laws, and the stabilization of employment.

It is the hope of President Banwell that all commercial and fraternal organizations in southern Oregon will co-operate with the local Eagles in order to make the visit of President Douglas to Medford one of the high spots in his trip throughout the west.

D. A. R. News

One of the pleasant events of the past week was the annual Christmas party of Grater Lake Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution, on Saturday, Dec. 15, at Mrs. Volney Dixon's home. A Christmas tree, with interesting gifts for everyone, and a delightful program were special features of the meeting.

Miss Van Meter's reading, "The Thin Little Lonesome One," by Anne Hamilton Donnell was a lovely little Christmas story and was followed by another in lighter vein, "A Brushday Present for Rastus," by Peggy Reece.

Miss Margaret Childers graciously provided the musical part of the program with two piano solos, Prelude, "The Haldrop," by Chopin, and "Valse Bluette," by Drigo.

In the absence of the regent, Mrs. H. F. W. Spitzer, Mrs. C. C. Murray, vice-regent, presided during the meeting and Mrs. B. G. Harding, Mrs. Glenn Taylor and Mrs. Burt Lowry were in charge of the enjoyable social hour and served delicious little Christmas cakes and coffee. Mrs. Watt and Miss Jane Dixon also assisted the hostesses and Miss Clara Wood poured at the tea-table which was very attractive with a center piece of miniature Christmas trees.

It was a pleasure to welcome the chapter's new member, Miss Gertrude Butler, and Mrs. Howard who was a guest.

The next meeting will be held on Jan. 19, at the home of Mrs. R. G. Beach, 113 Geneva avenue.

PROSECUTOR HITS REED PARDON PLEA BY NEW EVIDENCE

preheated, and are fugitives from justice now.

Affidavits of two members of the jury that found Reed guilty—George A. Porter and Charles S. Butterfield—are also embodied in the protest. The affidavits state on the first ballot, Reed was found guilty, but the long deliberations were concerned with whether to vote the death penalty or life imprisonment.

Photographs of the murder spot, and the statement of the court, in denying a new trial, are also part of the protest.

The brief also submits a number of affidavits from residents of Ashland, in contradiction to affidavits by the defense.

The petition for clemency bitterly attacks the positive identification of Reed, by Roy Laymon, Ashland policeman, with Knott at the time of his slaying. "No one, as far as can be learned, ever questioned his veracity or character, save counsel for Reed," the protest says.

Reed's counsel has affidavits from Ashland residents and Moore Hamilton of this city, averring that Laymon told them, shortly after the murder, he could not identify the slayer, but testified at the trial positively identifying Reed.

Reed claims that at the time of the murder, he was in a hamburger stand, half a mile from the scene, and introduces affidavits of two Ashland residents in support of this contention. Reed admits he traveled in an auto, from Denver with Jackson and McQuade, but parted from them upon arrival at Ashland.

Knott was slain, when with Laymon, he was riding in a police car near the Enders warehouse, they saw two men, and commanded them to halt, for questioning. The pair stood in the glare of the headlights, and a hail of lead greeted the second query of the officers.

Reed, in his petition, claims that he spent the night of the murder in a rooming house near the Plaza in Ashland, and that he visited the police station when the news of the murder was spread. The next morning, he says, he left for the north. The morning following the killing, state police found Reed's auto wrecked near Poots Creek. Evidence found in it resulted in Reed's arrest at Longmont, Colo., on Christmas eve, 1931.

The protest to leniency, cites that the murder of Knott, "was one of the three brutal and cowardly murders of peace officers in this county in recent years," and further declares, "Reed is not entitled to either commutation of sentence or pardon."

The petition for clemency is based upon the grounds of new evidence, alleged misconduct of a woman juror, in visiting the scene of the murder, without court instructions and alleged error of the court in admitting testimony of a burglary in California, showing that stolen goods were found in Reed's auto.

LEAGUE MOVES TO PREVENT FURTHER CLASHES IN SAAR

the woman, whose injuries were slight. Quick to arrive on the scene were 30 members of a "disciplinary force" of the German front.

Shot as Warning
 The official version said Justice, who was in civilian clothes, believed he was in danger and fired a warning shot with his revolver. A man named Neumeister was wounded in the stomach but not seriously.

The crowd set upon Justice and beat him badly. The Earl of Aylesford went to Justice's assistance and was knocked into the gutter, receiving a black eye. Fraulein Braun said he also was struck on the head and beaten on the back.

Justice was taken to a hospital, from which he was to be discharged today. His force has no direct connection with the "plebiscite army."

Probe to Be Pushed
 "The police have received the order," said a statement by the league governing commission, "to proceed with special vigor in clearing up the incident and to establish responsibilities without regard for the persons involved."

A sequel to the fight developed as Prince Hubertus von Lowenstein, a German exile, and his half-brother, Count von Alvensleben, protested to Geoffrey George Knott, special commissioner, that they had been insulted by British officers in a cafe.

DENVER MAN GOT PART OF URSCHEL MONEY, IS CHARGE

for Bates after the latter's arrest in Denver also represented a group of suspects in the $60,000 kidnaping of Charles Boettcher, II.

Laska, a gray haired bespectacled attorney, dapperly dressed, was taken to the office of E. K. Newman, department of justice agent, for questioning in which he denied the charges against him emphatically.

Got Big "Cut" Is Claim.
 Laska, asserted Nathan, received between $10,000 and $11,000 of the ransom money. However, Nathan acknowledged that federal agents had been unable to locate the currency Laska was accused of receiving.

Describing the recent recovery of $46,000 of the Urschel loot in Oregon and Washington Nathan said "It was necessary that special agents of the division don boots, overalls and other equipment of a like character and dig for this 'buried treasure' in a manner depicted in certain works of romantic fiction dealing with the recovery of pirate gold."

were tried in South Dakota, resulting in a jury deadlock and an acquittal for Mrs. Sankey and dismissal of charges against Mrs. Kohler.
