Personal Health Service

By William Brady, M.D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene not to disease diagnosis or treatment will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

A correspondent writing from the great wheat belt says he bought a bushel of wheat at the mill the other day for $1.50.

This wheat was cleaned ready for grinding. Correspondent thinks the American people are passing up a good thing in not using nature's finest food.

Well, to return to the bushel of wheat. Once you've lugged it home what are you going to do with it?

You give the impression that hard wheat may be cracked in a coffee mill, and that is so. But may I suggest how we prepare it at our house.

Put such quantity as desired—not too much, for it swells in cooking—in water and boil for five minutes.

Then let it stand for from 12 to 24 hours. After this prolonged soaking boil again on moderate fire till soft as desired.

Keep it in ice box, and heat up as required. It will be found one of the finest, most palatable and healthful breakfast foods in the world.

Only one week till Christmas, with all the juveniles as pleasant to meet as a candidate in the springtime.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—George Martin Lott, of Chicago, the only man who ever played a set of tennis before Queen Mary of England with his shirt tail hanging out, formally entered the professional ranks yesterday.

The inability of the city of Klamath Falls to control a Walkathon raging there has its advantages.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Diary: Up and a letter from Dean Ackerman of Columbia to talk informally to his journalism class, flattering me mightily.

Free circulation of drugstore almanacs and 1935 calendars is noted, and several have obtained the new edition without blasting their future by signing a mortgage or pointing a gun.

Along toward the stars of this week with the Yule spirit manifesting itself gloriously, there will come a sad story imparting the glum information that Mary Pickford is weary-hearted and almost in tears, owing to nothing-doing, in her divorce suit against Douglas Fairbanks.

The Knox liquor control law is now functioning so well that a minor, suffering from the delusion he is tough, can drink a glass of beer, without yelling all night.

How to wear a hat. Your hat may provide the finishing touch in a costume to make the wearer distinguished or dowdy, individual or common, and, particularly, old or young.

And Joseph Hergeshelmer called away the other day led up and satirized from the business of turning out movie. He thinks he will probably never write another. He is one of the few lucky wretches who never worked on a newspaper and thinks it would be fun, ha, ha, to be a columnist and take a few light but stinging jabs at the neurotic modern woman as well as the decadent male.

Personal nomination for the most perfect figure among the screen ladies—that of Ginger Rogers.

Toy Making Relief. SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 17.—(AP)—T. J. Edmonds of Washington, D. C., recently named federal emergency relief administrator for the Pacific northwest, here today on his first inspection tour, recommended to relief administrators in Oregon, Montana, Idaho and Washington that a temporary Christmas toy-making and repair project start immediately.

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

THE Du Ponts, a senate investigating committee tells us, made profits approximating 99,000 per cent on its investment in a war-time powder plant in Tennessee.

THE Gold Coast Railroad company applies to the interstate commerce commission for permission to build 95 miles of railroad in the lower Rogue river country, one of the wild and least developed regions of Oregon.

THE story, naturally enough, makes the front pages of the papers, and we all read it—most of us, of course, with our fingers crossed.

THIS much, however, is true: If somebody, or several somebodies, can become firmly enough convinced that money can be made by building railroads—in the lower Rogue river country, or elsewhere—railroads will be built.

IT is dinned into our ears that when people begin to SPEND MONEY, again prosperity will return.

A LOT of people tell us it is WICKED to make a profit, and for that reason no one is to be permitted to make a profit hereafter.

THE Oregon liquor control commission turns over another $100,000 to the fund for unemployment relief, bringing the relief contributions so far from this source to the rather considerable sum of $850,000.

STILL, this question arises in the minds of thoughtful people: If less liquor were consumed, would so many people NEED RELIEF?

YOU can't answer that question, of course. Nobody else can. Perhaps there is no answer. And people insist on having liquor, getting it illegally if they can't get it legally.

There is a routing need for an anti-guitar racket, phony piano players of the movies. No other deceit so spots the cinema, illusion as players sitting at a dummy keyboard going through a lot of silly gyrations.

November business this year, up to and including the 17th, is already 39 per cent ahead of the corresponding period in 1933, and is increasing the lead daily, the company reports.

The best photograph that could be taken in Washington recently was the one of that lady in red lights at a new deal party.

A MOUNTAIN OF MAIL

Miss June Richardson, laughingly surveys the deluge of requests for glasses sent in response to California Home Brand's attractive offer.

Conserving Concern Swamped With Requests for Glasses

Just in case you are wondering why those attractive glasses you recently requested of the California Conserving Company have failed to arrive—cast an eye at the picture above. Just two days mail, and every buying sack contains requests for the glasses. So popular has the offer made by the California Conserving Company—perhaps you will recall the advertisement in these pages that stated a set of six beautifully decorated beverage glasses would be sent entirely without cost in return for eight labels or bottle tops from California Home Brand products—that the mailroom of the company is completely snowed under with orders. A special crew is working in shifts endeavoring to supply as many orders as possible without undue delay.

Called $427,000 Holdup 'Link'
