

SLEEP SICKNESS IMMUNITY GIVEN BY NEW VACCINE

Tests With Animals Shows Positive Results—Solution Of Mouse Brain Provides Vaccine Basis.

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE Associated Press Science Editor PITTSBURGH, Dec. 26.—(AP)—A promising start toward vaccination against sleeping sickness was announced at the American Association for the advance of science today.

The sleeping sickness vaccine is developing from the same studies in the New York City health department which produced the recent announced vaccine for immunizing children against infantile paralysis.

For sleeping sickness, the vaccine has been tried only on animals. The new experiment was described briefly by Maurice Brody, M. D., of the New York health department.

He is working under the direction of William H. Park, M. D., Mice Inoculated They took sleeping sickness virus from human patients in the St. Louis outbreak and inoculated mice, producing sleeping sickness in the animals.

As this disease attacks the nerves and the brain, they sought in the brains of the animals for the hoped vaccine. They took a five per cent solution of the mouse brain and treated them with formalin which killed the sleeping sickness virus.

This dead virus they then injected into 100 healthy mice. It immunized all the animals so that they could not afterward be infected with sleeping sickness. Furthermore, the vaccine itself had no apparent bad effect on the mice.

The possible end of infantile paralysis was also forecast today. The results of two different vaccines, one discovered in Philadelphia, the other in New York, gave this promise.

Speedy Action Both are speedy, one showing immunizing effects in a little over three days, and both within a week. This indicates that both may possess the power to stop epidemic outbreaks before they become serious.

The Philadelphia vaccine results on 25 children were reported by John A. Kolmer, M. D., of Temple university. None had infantile paralysis. But they were poor subjects for the vaccine tests because most of them were convalescing from other diseases.

Nevertheless their blood after vaccination became so strongly resistant that it successfully neutralized human infantile paralysis virus from the 1934 California epidemic. This means that in a test tube the children's blood took all the virulence out of the agency that caused the infantile paralysis.

Experiments with animals indicate that this neutralization test is "valid," a sign of real immunity gained from vaccination.
