

ROOSEVELT'S DAY HAS HIGH AND LOW ENJOYMENT POINT

Swim In Late Afternoon Most Fun—Breakfasts In Bed—Lunches While Working.

By FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON Associated Press Staff Writer WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. (AP)—President Roosevelt's day—like that of most folks—has a high and low of personal enjoyment. Around the clock, there's one moment he likes best. It comes in the late afternoon when, on the way from the executive office to the White House proper to prepare for dinner, he stops at the swimming pool, and then plunges into its warm water for a rollicking half hour of water polo.

The bad moments come later in the evening when he finds his swallow-tail, studs and other formal attire laid out. He doesn't like to struggle into this outfit, and he doesn't mind saying so. Except for the demands of winter's social season he'd escape it.

Awakens Early With Mr. Roosevelt, the day begins at 7 or shortly thereafter and for the next few hours his bedroom is his office. While having breakfast in bed—a habit of long-standing—he reads current events in seven or eight newspapers, including New York and Washington publications.

Often the more immediate members of the official family call by on the way to their desks for talks. This group includes Post-Master General Farley, Secretaries Morgenthau, Hull and Ickes, and Donald Richberg, director of the emergency council.

Usually while he shaves—and he shaves himself—the secretaries Stephen T. Early and Marvin H. McIntyre, arrange for the day ahead, fixing appointments.

Dressed, the president goes to the executive office to begin the round of conferences that cover the gamut of national and international problems.

Remaining at his desk for luncheon, Mr. Roosevelt sets aside this hour for a talk with some man close to the top problem of the day. Monday's luncheon is always reserved for Secretary Morgenthau.

Swim Is High Point Afternoons vary, but the chief executive usually gets in an hour or so on the everlasting stack of mail that piles up on the broad, flat desk. More conferences and then—the swim. The president's voice, raised in cheerful banter, can be heard outside as he tosses a ball at his companions, perhaps Gus Gennerich personal bodyguard, high officials or one of his sons.

Emerging from the water Mr. Roosevelt bundles up for the brief trip to the mansion. Often there is a visitor there for a chat before dinner and invariably the discussion veers to official subjects.

The Roosevelts like guests for dinner and around the table there usually are intimate friends from many walks of life. Evenings vary. Frequently he stops for a movie on the second floor before going to his desk in the mansion for another attack upon the mail or a conference.

Many a time the ship's clock on the desk has clanged the eight bells or midnight before lights were switched off.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM AT JACKSONVILLE TO BE REPEATED SUNDAY

The two Christmas programs presented at Jacksonville by the Sunday school of the Jacksonville Presbyterian church were so well received that they are to be given again Sunday, Dec. 30.

In the evening at 8 o'clock the beautiful Christmas pageant, "The Story of Christ's Birth," will be repeated, and the cantata, "The Star of the East," will be presented at the regular morning worship service at 11 o'clock. "The Star of the East" written by G. E. Pearls, has an excellent arrangement of words and music that makes it unusually pleasant to hear. Coupled with the able direction of Alma Gilbert Nee and a talented choir, this renders the service very impressive.

- Following is the order of presentation:
- 1.—Prelude
  - 2.—Virginia Fick
  - 3.—Arise Shine
  - 4.—The Stranger Star
  - 5.—Sing O Heavens
  - 6.—Beautiful Star
  - 7.—Awake, Put on Thy Strength
  - 8.—Bethlehem
  - 9.—Lead Thou Me On
  - 10.—There Shall Be Night No More
  - 11.—Rejoice Greatly

865,210 SPECIMENS IN HARVARD'S HERBARIUM

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. —(UP)—Gray herbarium of Harvard university now has a total of 865,210 specimens, one of the greatest in the world. Established in Civil War days when Asa Gray, pioneer American botanist, gave his private collection of more than 200,000 specimens to Harvard, the herbarium last year received 30,000 additional specimens.

May Enter Bendix Race

CLEVELAND (UP)—Maxine Howard, wife of Ben O. Howard, Cleveland pilot and plane designer, plans to enter the Bendix trophy race, transcontinental speed dash, in the national air races next year. If she does, it will be the first time a woman has entered the cross-country grind.

Mink Enjoyed New Diet

HOQUIAM, Wash. (UP)—Charles Lewis, Hoh River rancher, failed to prosper as a dairy and beef farmer. He did fair raising milk, but food supply for the fur-bearers was a problem. Finally he discovered mink would thrive on milk and beef, so now his herds provide food. He is doing well.
