PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 29.—(AP)—The Oregon State college "found" itself tonight and defeated the smooth Union Oil team, 29 to 22.

The Oilers, who have beaten Oregon State twice this season, dashed away to a 9-0 lead before the Beavers got the range.

Then, with their man-to-man defense organized and with alert ball handling, the Beavers overhauled the Portlanders and went ahead, 15 to 13, at the half.

The Staters continued to keep the situation in hand the second half and never were headed.

AUTO DEATHS DUE TO BLINDING RAIN

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 29.—(AP)—The blinding rainstorm which swept Portland was blamed for two of the three traffic accident fatalities here today.

Pete Celestine, 84, the tenth aged victim of the month, died today of injuries received when struck by a street car two days before Christmas.

The storm victims were William Justus, 74, and Jim I. Mallos, 46, who both died today. Ironically, Justus was struck by the automobile of a friend, T. J. Irwin, who had arranged to meet the elderly man but did not see him step out from the curb because of the rain.

John B. Kisky reported that during a heavy downpour Mallos walked broadside into the Kisky car.

BILL MORGAN, NOW PRO FOOTBALL ACE, PAYS CITY VISIT

By Dick Applegate

Bill Morgan is back in town today covered with glory and remarkably few scars after having had one of the most brilliant seasons of any man in professional football, if the reports which come in from eastern football sportswriters are to be taken as a criterion.

Hailed by such critics as Lou Little, of Columbia, Morgan's coach Steve Owen (who says that Morgan is the greatest tackle of all time), sport writers Joe Williams, of the New York World Telegram, Ned Irish of the same paper, Bud Rennie of the N. Y. Herald Tribune, Garry Schumaker of the N. Y. Journal and Walter Fiescher of the N. Y. Times as the outstanding tackle to ever appear in the Polo grounds at New York, Morgan returns without any indication that he thinks he's good.

After playing the entire season against such opponents as Detroit, Green Bay, Pittsburgh, Boston, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and the Chicago Bears, Morgan still thinks that professional football is fun. He admitted that there was as much difference between professional and college football as there was between freshman and varsity football, but thinks that the pro game is more fun because the opposition is tougher, and any player has to keep his mind on the game to get by.

Asked the most thrilling moment of the last season Morgan stated that it was probably the second touchdown that his team, the N. Y. Giants scored against the Chicago Bears in the play-off for the championship. That touchdown put the Giants out in front and seemed to change the entire aspect of the game for Morgan. The hardest job he had in the entire season, he said, was getting into the dressing room after their victory in the same game.

Morgan stated that he saw Bernie Hughes, former team-mate and now playing pro-ball for the Chicago Cardinals, play against Brooklyn, and that Hughes was easily the outstanding man on the team. "Iron Mike" Mikulak and Bree Cupoletti, also of Oregon, were playing for the Cardinals, and both turned in remarkable games, according to Morgan. The Giants do not play the Cardinals, so the two Medford men have not yet met in a professional game. Hughes is still playing in the south.

Morgan stated that he doubted if pro football would ever replace college football to anywhere near the same degree that pro baseball has done, but he stated that it would eventually be on a par. Asked if the spirit of a professional team was inferior to that in the schools, he emphatically stated that it was not. On the contrary, he asserted that the pro brand is superior, mainly through personal pride, in that every man on the field was playing against a "big shot," and tried to get personal aggrandizement by "knocking his ears down."

Open passing makes the pro game faster and more interesting, Morgan said, and results in fewer long passes and more short ones followed by laterals. When asked why he thought colleges did not use more laterals, he said that they lacked the fitness and sureness that comes only in professional football. In this connection he mentioned also the beautiful kicking developed by the pro players.

Ken Strong, teammate of Morgan's, and whom Morgan calls the greatest football player alive, averaged 60 yards on punts, and got away several over eighty in the past season. Playing in tennis shoes to afford footing on the frozen turf in the championship game, Strong kicked all the opening kick-offs over the goal line, ending the game with two broken toes. Morgan cited this as an example of the kind of spirit displayed on the professional teams.

Morgan will be in Medford until the 11th of January, at which time the Giants are re-forming at San Francisco in preparation for their game with Earle Nevers' All-Star professional club in the Knights of Columbus benefit game to be played in Keizer stadium, that city, on January 20. On January 27 the Giants meet the Chicago Bears in Los Angeles, after which the team will disband, unless plans now being formulated to match the team with the Chicago Cardinals in Portland the next week-end are completed.

In the case of the latter Bernie Hughes and Morgan would meet for the first time in a pro game, right in their own state.

As for Klamath Falls, Burgher is silent due to the fact that his scouts are not in as close contact with them as they are with the other teams of the Southern Oregon league.

However, Coach Burgher promises fans of southern Oregon some real basketball for the coming week-end. A defendant has not been named as yet but he stated some outstanding team will be in Medford for a game or two.

In looking over the progress of the squad as a whole, one can agreeably see that the boys are as "fit as a fiddle." Now that the holiday season is just about over the boys will settle down to some even stiffer practice schedules and training rules.

The first real basketball contest which will in no doubt furnish statistics for comparison in the future is with the Klamath Falls Pelicans on January 18, on the maples of Medford high school.

MEDFORD QUINT UNABLE TO LAND PRACTICE TILTS

(By Harold Crove)

Basketball, basketball, do you want to play basketball? Come play a game, let me sign your name. With ten days of practice credited to experience, Coach D. K. Burgher has still an open account as for a basketball game with some outside school for this coming week-end.

Burgher announced that he has opened negotiations with northern California teams but as yet has had no luck in getting their "John Henry" on the dotted line.

Russ Brown, who tore a cartilage in his knee on the first night of practice, will probably not see action any more this season due to the fact that he will be graduated on January 26. His knee will not be sufficiently healed for him to create any exercise of a great extent upon it.

Although Burgher has not scheduled any games so far this season, he has been holding some very stiff scrimmage sessions.

He has been weaning his younger players and has been adding knowledge to the older players as well as the younger players.

Concerning the experience "eastern" upon the squad situated at the top of the hill just south of Medford, Burgher stated that his team will probably be beaten. But members of the dyed-in-the-wool fans have the thought safely buried in mind that the Medfordites will not be beaten.

RAIN AND INJURY SLOWS EAST TEAM

(By Harold Crove)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29.—(AP)—Bad luck continued today to hound eastern football stars in practice preparations for the annual east-west charity game here New Year's day.

With two star members of the east, Duane Purvis and Pig Lund, both halfbacks, in the hospital, the remaining eastern players were hampered by a steady drizzle that minimized the workout at Berkeley.

Coaches Andy Kerr and Dick Hanley sent their charges through an indoor drill at the University of California gymnasium and finished up with an outdoor workout.

The knee injury which forced Purvis of Purdue out of the competition several days ago and a severe cold which saw Minnesota's Lund confined today has left the east short-handed in the backfield.

Coach Kerr said Lund's confinement was merely a precautionary measure. He will be released tomorrow.

QUINT OFFICIALS ASK $25 A GAME, ARE OFFERED $20

(By Harold Crove)

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 29.—(AP)—A compromise salary offer but a virtual "lockout" threat was the answer tonight of graduate managers to the threatened sport strike of a group of north division Pacific coast conference basketball officials.

The graduate managers of the colleges and universities of the division announced officials this season will receive $20 a game, which is a $5 lift over last year, and $5 a day expenses plus transportation.

At the same time the grads who hold the purse strings said they would seek new and younger whistle-blowers.

Six basketball officials, with Emil Pilsco of Portland acting as their chairman, gave notice they would not work for less than $25 a game, $6 a day expense money and $7 a day "lost time" as well as transportation, it was announced by Carl Lodell, president of the northern division graduate managers.

"It was decided by the managers to accept these declarations and to make over arrangements for the 1935 season," said a statement released by the graduate managers.

'RED-DEVIL' PETE BOUT UNSETTLED

(By Harold Crove)

Word has been received here by Promoter Mack Lillard that the winner take all wrestling match between the Red Devil and Pete Belcastro, which was suggested by the Red Devil in a telegram from Texas, is not looked upon too fondly by Belcastro, who wired from Sacramento that a 60-40 cut would be more satisfactory to him. No word has been received from the masked man in his Texas hacienda just what he thinks of the counter proposition.

There has never been any great amount of affection wasted between the two bullies, their only meeting having been a wild and exciting rough house with nothing much barred-or overlooked.

In the Belcastro-Red Devil encounter it looked like the Red Devil's fight, after he had flopped the Italian in 18 minutes with an arm-bar, for the first fall, and had been giving Belcastro quite a serious thrashing. The tables turned, however, when he got out of the ring and was climbing back in. Belcastro with a wild leap kicked the Red Devil into the third row.

So that's the way it stands now. The Red Devil doesn't think that Belcastro can connect with two kicks in two fights, and wants a winner-take-all go. Belcastro seems to remember those first few floggings on the noggin' before his kick landed on the man's head, and wants it 60-40. There are some who saw the first encounter that consider this a w-i-l-d advised move on his part. But if the return match is arranged it will undoubtedly be blood curdling.

Autolists Get Break

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 29.—(AP)—A group of Portland motorists found they didn't need their traffic violation tags "fixed" by some friend. Their cases were dismissed because the arresting officer could not appear against them today. He resigned from the police force yesterday.
