

LAUNDRY BUSINESS REFLECTS RETURN OF BETTER TIMES

Not every city on the coast can boast the excellent laundry service to be had in Medford. Among leaders in this field is the Medford Domestic Laundry, which has just completed its year-end survey of business done during 1934.

The report is encouraging, both to the company, and to the many people affected, in that it indicates a trend upward in general business conditions.

The laundry was founded in 1907, and was taken over in 1918 by the late Glen R. Fabrick. Upon the death of his father, Glen L. Fabrick took up the position of president, the capacity in which he now serves.

All the steam for the plant is generated in the company's own boiler, which is the largest year-round user of sawdust from the local Timber Products company.

One machine, which $10,000 has a capacity of seven sheets a minute. This machine also does other flat work. Another machine, the only one of its kind in southern Oregon, brushes the nap of wool blankets back to its best condition, making the blankets look like new.

The laundry, according to Fabrick, has no special machine for tear buttons off, or rip collars. In fact, he said, they have remarkably few accidents, considering the tremendous volume of the plant.

Markets

ROOSEVELT SILENT ON PROGRAM WILL URGE ON CONGRESS

(Continued from page one) On Monday, each party called organizational meetings for today. The work of organizing was not without its potential fireworks. The 323 house Democrats had to choose a floor leader from among eight candidates, all promising to stay in the fight till the end.

Other meetings today were mostly formalities. Senate Democrats agreed to rename Senator Robinson of Arkansas as their leader; senate Republicans were behind Senator McNary of Oregon for that job in their party. The 102 house Republicans were expected to renominate Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York as their floor leader.

After house Democrats chose their leader, another contested issue was in store. Democratic leaders, seeking to protect the administration program from any revolt, put on a broad campaign for a change in rules so that 218 members instead of 145 would have to sign a petition to force a vote on a bill which lacked administration approval.

There was opposition, especially among some middle and far westerners who in the past have hit at what they termed attempts at "ear rule." Supporters of the 218 rule, who said it would pass, declared it was not directed at the bonus. Representative Byrns and other chiefs, conceding the bonus will pass the house the first time, intend to bring it up as promptly as possible so that no charge of delay can be made.

The opening of the far-noted trial today presented boom-town scenes as 700 reporters, wire men and others descended upon the busy engaged, but calm, 2700 inhabitants of the village. Many Disappointed Seventy of the townfolk were in a line whose head pressed against the court house door before the opening. Many of them were disappointed, for they could not be jammed into the tiny space allotted for the trial. Some said: "We won't pay our taxes." At least one girl offered to pay the sheriff money for standing room.

LIDBERGH SEATED NEAR ACCUSED IN NEW JERSEY COURT

(Continued from page one) Colonel Lindbergh watched the prospective jurors with deep interest, noted each of them as they reacted to state of defense questions. At all times his features were calm. Now and again he cupped his chin in his hands. He was not observed in any studied glances toward Hauptmann, whose chair was less than four yards away and against the same courtroom wall.

Defense Accused At one point in the morning's proceedings the defense was accused of trying to attract "unwarranted sympathy." This was when C. Lloyd Fisher of the defense staff asked a prospective juror if the presence of so many troopers in uniform would influence him. Justice Trenchard also thought the question "unjustified."

Hauptmann was heavily guarded when he was brought into the courtroom, but no manacles bound his hands. He was dressed in a neat gray suit. So was Colonel Lindbergh, who strode in a few minutes later and passed directly in front of the prisoner. Justice Trenchard, grey-haired and commanding in presence, made brisk

An aged man, though he waited in line, refused to admit any interest in the trial. "It makes me no money," he averred. Another said he only came (from 40 miles away) to "look at the public."
