more than half the precipitation recorded since January 11, when the storm first started, has been snow. The deepest recorded here at any one time was 3 of an inch on January 12, there being no official tabulation available this afternoon. Only 3 of an inch lay on the ground in Medford this morning, having melted for the most part as it fell during the night, but furrles throughout the day were adding to it somewhat. The forecast for tonight and Saturday is unsettled with snow, promising no letup in the near future. The storm is unusual in that more snow has fallen during the last week than in any similar period for several years, although the amount of precipitation is not out of the ordinary. 43 inches on Sexton.

Truck and bus lines reported today that conditions are not serious on the highway north, although 43 inches of snow was reported on Summit of Sexton mountain, and nine and one-half inches have fallen at Wolf Creek. Snow plows are busy in the mountains north of Grants Pass. Truck and bus drivers making the trip this morning from Dunsmuir report that five feet of snow had fallen up until last night at that city but that with chaining the road there is passable.

A blizzard extending into and filling traffic in the Klamath Falls section, was also reported at Dunsmuir today.

Officials of Crater Lake national park had no word from Crater Lake today, but at the last report Wednesday the depth there was more than 10 feet. The Crater Lake highway has been kept open as far as the Diamond Lake junction.

PORTLAND, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Warning of a new cold wave sweeping southward through the Pacific northwest banished any hope that many Oregon communities might have had for immediate relief from the worst winter storms in a decade.

The federal weather bureau here said Portland thermometers may register 20 degrees or under tonight.

Meanwhile, western central Oregon and southern Oregon experienced the worst snow and cold conditions in many years. Klamath county was virtually snowbound, with a new blizzard raging today, following on the heels of yesterday's severe storm. Bend, in the heart of central Oregon, reported that all motor vehicle traffic between that city and southern points was definitely halted.

Transportation crippled. Transportation service by train, plane and motor bus was crippled by the storm. Motor lines were down in several sections, and communication systems were having much trouble.

Ice-covered streets caused many accidents, most of them of a minor nature, however. In Portland last night a fire truck skidded on the slippery surface and crashed into a street car. Two persons were hurt.

Highway travel was hazardous in many parts of Oregon, and in still other parts it was impossible.

The Dalles - California highway, south of Bend, and the Fremont - Rural roads in Deschutes, Klamath and Lake counties were virtually impassable.

The Wapinitia highway and the road north of Bend were open, out stages were running hours behind schedule. Driving was perilous. The upper Columbia highway was open, but motorists who were not on emergency business were not to cancel trips. Slide blockades were feared. The highway surface was treacherous. County road closing in Wasco county was imminent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Traffic moved haltingly with numerous accidents, many schools were closed, and the mall went through with postmen on skis today as the winter's severest storm pelted snow over the Pacific northwest and the mountain regions of northern California.

Several logging camps on the Olympic peninsula in Washington were shut down when snow as deep as two feet made further operations impractical.

Rural schools near Spokane and in other parts of eastern Washington remained closed today because snow-drifts blocked county roads, throttling traffic. Spokane experienced its heaviest fall in six years, with the white substance more than 11 inches deep in level places.

Film Actors Marooned.

A Hollywood moving picture company, only recently arrived to film Jack London's "Call of the Wild," was all but marooned at Mount Baker lodge, near Bellingham, Wash. The snow was 12 1/4 feet deep at the lodge.

Fourteen snowplows worked stubbornly to keep roads open in Skagit and Snohomish counties, but traffic was virtually demoralized. The largest snowplow in Spokane county was broken in an attempt to cut through a drift blocking a highway.

Several traffic accidents were reported in Seattle yesterday, where ice coated the streets.

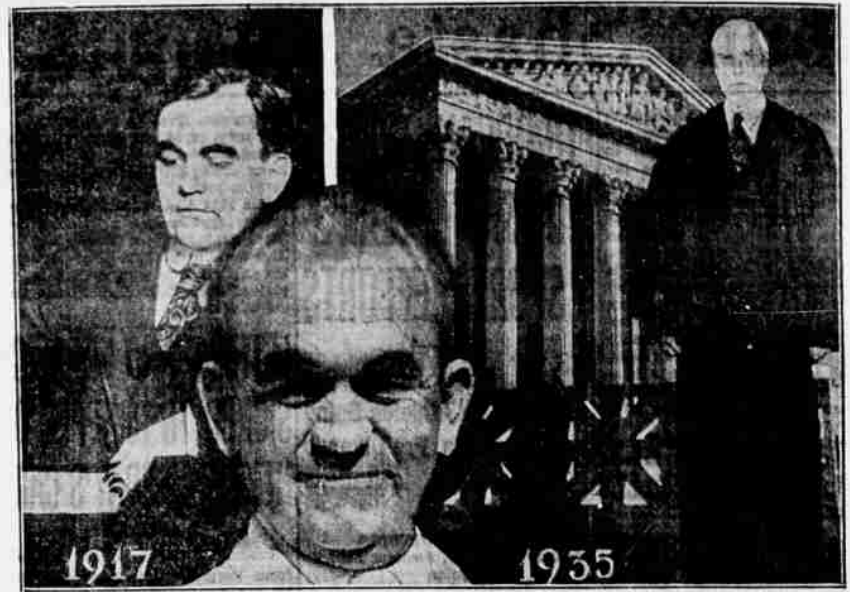

Some sections of Oregon reported the heaviest fall in 15 years. Several rural schools in that state were also closed, and traffic over secondary highways was halted. Trains from California arrived in Portland as much as three hours late.

RADIO CORPORATIONS ORDERS 'A' DIVIDEND

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Directors of the Radio Corporation of America today declared a dividend covering all accumulations on the preferred "A" stock amounting to $0.25 a share.

Dividends have not been paid on the preferred "A" shares since the first quarter of 1932.

MOONEY'S FATE RESTS FINALLY WITH SUPREME COURT

The fate of Tom Mooney, many times debated by governors of California and courts, finally rests with the Supreme Court of the United States which will review his case. Mooney is shown center as he looks today and, at left, as he was when he was convicted in 1917 in the San Francisco Preparedness Day parade bombing. Chief Justice Hughes (right) heads the high court which will pass on his fate, with the court building shown, right. (Associated Press Photos)

NEIGHBOR'S STORY CAUSES BREAK IN WOMAN'S CONTROL

the court is trying this case. I know the court is."

"The defendant and his wife are under high tension," Edward J. Rellly, chief of the defense staff, pleaded in their behalf.

Justice Thos. W. Trenchard shook his head, dubiously.

"This woman who made this outburst is his wife?" the court asked. Rellly nodded.

"Madame," Justice Trenchard said to Mrs. Hauptmann, "don't you see the impropriety of this outburst. I am asking you, don't you see?"

Mrs. Hauptmann stood silent.

Wife Apologizes

"Will you promise you won't do it again?"

"I like to try, but sometimes I can't help," she apologized. Her voice broke.

"I'll not again offend these gentlemen and the jury."

Justice Trenchard suggested that Hauptmann promise, too. Rellly interposed that his client had wanted to apologize for his conduct of yesterday, when he shouted: "Mister mister, you stop lying! You are telling a story," at Special Agent Thos. H. Sisk on the witness stand.

Hauptmann was tense, but motionless, throughout his wife's outcry and subsequent apology. As questioning of Mrs. Achenbach resumed, Mrs. Hauptmann settled back into her seat, her face still flushed.

Taking up her story, Mrs. Achenbach joined them as they were talking on her front porch that morning.

Q. Did you observe Hauptmann that morning?

A. When he went down my front steps he kind of supported himself on the side of the stoop.

Claimed Leg Hurt

Mrs. Achenbach said Mrs. Hauptmann explained "Richard hurt his leg during the trip."

The wife, she said, touched Hauptmann's leg with a "sort of massage motion" while the couple were on the porch.

Witness released the witness without further development that Hauptmann, in his alleged fall from the kidnap ladder, had received the leg injury.

Mrs. Achenbach sat quietly on the witness stand, her face toward the jury. Hauptmann stared hard at her.

Rellly took the witness. Q. After Anna Hauptmann came back from Europe in 1928 with your children, did she present you with a bill?

A. Yes.

Q. And you refused to pay it?

A. I guess that's right.

Mrs. Hauptmann listened intently to Mrs. Achenbach's testimony, manifesting interest in the trial, apparently for the first time. She laughed when the witness insisted the cost of a trip to Europe for one of her children with Mrs. Hauptmann had been repaid.

Could Have Been Rheumatism

Rellly brought out that Mrs. Achenbach had seen no bandage on Hauptmann's leg, no cane or crutch, no "smell of arnica."

"It could have been rheumatism," Rellly remarked. Mrs. Achenbach grinned.

Court recessed for lunch at 12:30 with the witness still on the stand. As the trial of Hauptmann went into its thirteenth day today the prosecution announced it felt it had built up a sufficient case to send him to the electric chair for the kidnaping and murder of Charley Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

The state's case is definitely in now," Attorney General Wilentz said. "Anytime, now, I can turn to the judge and say, 'Your honor, the state rests its case.'"

At the same time he said he had 60 more witnesses ready to testify should he find them necessary.

Hauptmann was visibly annoyed as he began the thirteenth day of his ordeal, hearing Henry Kiehn, Bronx engineer, complete testimony on the terrain of the Bronx where he lived and where the ransom for the Lindbergh baby was paid, and Sergeant John Wallace of the state police relate again to the jury the story of his arrest last September 19.

Mark Twain condemned polygamy on the ground that "no man can serve two masters."

ORRS GO SOUTH TO BUY FURNITURE STOCKS AND ATTEND DEALERS' MEET

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Orr left this city Thursday for Los Angeles where they will spend several days as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Travis. Mr. Travis is division manager for the Standard Oil company here before moving to the southern California metropolis.

While in Los Angeles, Mr. Orr will visit the furniture markets and inspect large California furniture stores for ideas to be incorporated in the remodeling program now underway at Weeks & Arr furniture store in this city.

Early in February, Mr. and Mrs. Orr will return to San Francisco where Mr. Orr will attend the furniture showings and meetings which will be held during Western Market Week. He is a director in the western association of furniture dealers and was also president of the Oregon Retail Furniture Dealers association.

Gene Orr, who is associated with his father in Weeks & Orr store here, will leave early next month for the Bay city where he will join his father and mother and attend the business and special sessions of the Pacific Coast furniture dealers.

While in the south, Bert and Gene Orr will select new merchandise for the Medford store as a part of an ambitious spring expansion program of Weeks & Orr. Workmen are now engaged in remodeling work in this store and interesting announcements as to the policy of his firm will be made public by Mr. Orr upon his return to Medford next month.

Self praise, little merit.
