SCREEN REVIEW

Built around the situations which arise when a woman of the world decides to publish her memoirs, "Biography of a Bachelor Girl," which opened yesterday at Hunt's Craterian is a humorous and witty picture, with few dull moments. Ann Harding portrays the bachelor girl and does so convincingly. Robert Montgomery is the editor of a sensational magazine who convinces her that she should print her experiences for the public, and while helping her with the manuscript falls in love with her himself.

Edward Everett Horton is one of the victims, whose early romance with the woman of the world is to appear in the story. Since he is to be a candidate for the senate, he naturally does not want the biography published, and enlists the aid of his future father-in-law to have it suppressed.

Sparkling wit, and gay humor make the picture better than the average with one scene screamingly funny, in which Horton tries to avenge himself on Editor Montgomery by means of fancy wrestling holds he has been studying.

Clever dialogue, especially in the ship board and mountain cabin scenes, make this a more than ordinarily interesting picture for most people. Critics throughout the country have welcomed it with open arms as a dispeller of gloom.

CROP LOAN BILLS PASS IN HOUSE AND SENATE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The house today passed and sent to the senate a $40,000,000 crop loan bill shortly after the senate approved one of its own calling for $100,000,000.

The legislation is an extension for the 1935-36 crop year of the authority previously granted to lend farmers money to buy seed, and feed for work stock. There were no immediate indications of the amount of which the two branches will compromise.

Charles Dickens Story on Rialto Screen Tomorrow

After making a sensational success as the star of the stage play, "Tobacco Road," it was inevitable that Henry Hull, who makes his screen debut in the pictureization of Charles Dickens' "Great Expectations," coming to the Rialto theatre tomorrow, would find himself in pictures. The stage's loss is the screen's gain.

For the first time since the passing of the great Lon Chaney, critics throughout the country have found someone in pictures whom they can honestly compare with the king of all screen character stars. Hull's characterization of the convict Magwitch in the Dickens story has been hailed as the finest bit of character playing the screen has shown for a long time—since the days, in fact, of the great Chaney. It is not hard to predict a brilliant future for Henry Hull after seeing what he has done with his masterful portrayal of Magwitch.

"Great Expectations"—when shown at a private preview here some time ago, revealed a departure in screen stories—in bringing to life on the screen a story that has become known as one of literature's great masterpieces. Lovers of Charles Dickens will heartily enjoy the thrill of seeing their favorites brought to life and, which is even more important, showgoers will see a picture which closely comes to being screen entertainment par excellence.

Little George Breakstone, one of the best of the child players has been given the role of Pip, the boy, and his playing of the orphan is another mark in his rapid rise to screen eminence.

Alan Hale as Gargery, the village blacksmith, is the lovable character played by the man, who has finally been given a role which was tailor-made for him and he turns in a remarkable characterization. Others in the cast include Jane Wyatt, Florence Reed, Francis L. Sullivan and Forrester Harvey.

Following the life of the poor orphan boy from his childhood in poverty and his rise to a gentleman of the world through an unknown benefactor, "Great Expectations" should prove to be the sort of story that holds entertainment for every member of the family—for those who wish romance, those who wish adventure and for those who like to see a favorite story perfectly brought to life.

Novelty Acts In Vaudeville Here Wednesday Night

Following the standard set by the last stage unit, "Happy Landings Revue," coming to the Craterian theatre for a one day engagement Wednesday, is said to be a novel and youthful presentation, with plenty of novelties and numerous headline acts.

The Alexander Brothers, unique comedy ball bouncers, head the unit with their novel and comical offering. Another unusual act is that of Cal Norris and his comedy monkeys. "Jiggs," the little monkey seen with Johnny Weismuller in "Tarzan and His Mate" is really the star of this act and his many antics are said to keep the house in an uproar.

Skreeter and Ray, long a favorite on leading vaudeville circuits, bring their own inimitable dancing and clowning act to further add to the fun.

Other include Cantu the Magician; Ben and Rita, gypsy troubadours; Ann Rose, sensational acrobatics; Melina Charka, a blonde torch singer with a captivating method of her own in delivering her various numbers; Peggy George, toe tap dancer and an eight-piece stage band, the Melody Aces.

On the screen, Helen Twelvrees and Joe Morrison will be shown in a comedy romance, "One Hour Late."
