

FOREST PROJECTS AWAIT EXPANSION CCC ENROLLMENT

Supervisor Janouch Says
Local Area Can Utilize
Any Force Made Available
for Improvements

A comprehensive program for the development of Rogue River national forest, under the national CCC expansion plan expected to be announced soon from Washington, D. C., was outlined yesterday by Karl Janouch, supervisor of Rogue River national forest, following a three weeks' conference with officials of the regional forest offices at Portland.

The local forest service has prepared scores of projects embracing enough work to take care of any appropriation likely to be made from the federal administration. Although the plan to increase the national CCC enrollment to 1,000,000 men is only under consideration, Supervisor Janouch judged from the president's recent talk on natural resources, in which he placed much weight on the importance of forest service work, that a considerable amount of new work is undoubtedly forthcoming. Should the plan be passed by congress, it is expected that funds would be made available by April 1.

Could Use 35,000 Men
The program prepared by officials of Rogue River forest includes projects whereby 35,000 men could be employed for the full field season. These men would be stationed throughout the forest at several new CCC camps which have been foreseen by local officials and already mapped. The work these men would carry on has been listed with view to priority and classified in the smallest detail. It will be checked over thoroughly before the anticipated appropriations are made and the program launched.

Fire protection and recreational development are given first consideration, due to the fact that Rogue River forest, which is classed among the most important forests of the country, is valued for its timber resources and as a recreational area for southern Oregon and northern California. The work will include camp ground improvements, fire hazard reduction and fire prevention, blister rust control, trail and road construction, fish and game preservation, roadside cleanup, telephone line construction and many other projects which will beautify, develop and perpetuate the forest.

Summer and Winter Haven
Under recreational development, Supervisor Janouch hopes to make the forest not only a summer but a winter haven. He disclosed plans for the development of Lake o' the Woods into an extensive winter resort. Skiing facilities would be established and the lake itself would possibly be made suitable for ice skating and ice boating. Ideal winter sports conditions are to exist in the Lake o' the Woods area, which would be made accessible either by opening a new road through the Dead Indian country to Ashland or by developing the one through the Pelican Bay district to Klamath Falls.

A new road would possibly be constructed from Fish Lake to Four-Mile lake, with a view to opening the latter to fishing and boating. A new resort would not be established in the Four-Mile area, however, as one there would tend to detract from the present Fish Lake and Lake o' the Woods resorts.

Would Complete Loop
Another recreational project under consideration is the completion of the loop from Ashland to Ashland mountain, thence to Wagner Butte, thence to Talent. By this road a short drive would be opened through an area of unsurpassed scenic value. Supervisor Janouch also revealed plans for maintenance of artificial ponds throughout the forest for pump supplies in case of forest fires, and plans to surround all areas of great forest fire hazard with fire breaks to prevent spread of fire.

Huckleberry mountain, visited each summer by approximately 3000 tourists, may be thinned of its shade trees and fenced from cattle to develop to the greatest possible extent its harvest of huckleberries.

SAWMILL OWNER PAYS LABORERS

The district attorney's office announced Tuesday that a cash settlement had been reached in the controversy between S. L. Dainard, Dead Indian district sawmill operator, and 18 workmen of the Ashland district. Deputy District Attorney Neilson said today a check for $925 has been received, in satisfaction of the claims for labor, ranging from $25 to $100. Dainard was bound over to the grand jury last week. In Ashland justice court, for alleged failure to maintain a monthly payroll, and larceny by bailer.

Deputy District Attorney Neilson said the proceedings held yesterday were "quite spirited."

SNOW WIPED OFF BY WARM BREEZE

A warm wind swept over southern Oregon from the south last night, taking with it most of the snow from the foothills surrounding Medford and reducing the level on the Siskiyou to 14 inches. It was reported this morning by the weather bureau that despite the rise in temperature, the runoff from the higher mountains has been gradual and the stream flow has not been increased to any alarming proportions. Until recently, it has been warmer in the higher regions of southern Oregon than in the valleys, according to the weatherman, because fog in the lower parts has held out the sunshine. The lowest temperature reached at Medford last night was 34 degrees.

Snow on the Siskiyou has melted 34 inches from its high point of the season, while the level on Sexton mountain is now only a foot. All main roads leading from Medford are reported nearly dry and may be traversed easily.

Good resolutions must find quick employment or spoil.
