SWEDISH BOYCOTT CURTAILS SHOWING OF NAZI PICTURES

STOCKHOLM (AP)—A formal protest to the government, by the editor of a theater owners' magazine, has revealed that German-made motion pictures have been effectively boycotted in Sweden this past year by the working classes.

The decision of socialist-minded trade unions not to patronize German movies, film distributors say, has caused a drastic curtailment in the number of such films brought into Sweden.

This has been especially true, it is pointed out, in the Swedish provinces. In Stockholm a few theaters have been billing German films quite steadily.

In some cases German films have been presented without the credit lines indicating where they were produced.

The protest to the government attacks this boycott as being unfair, the more so since a boycott of German-made merchandise, also agreed upon by the trade unions, has not been carried out to any great extent.

Newsreels which include views of Hitler or Nazi events are never shown in motion picture theaters which depend for patronage on Swedish workmen or their families.

Californiaans consume approximately half of the 500,000 cases of ripe olives produced in this country annually.

"Here is My Heart" Coming to Roxy Craterian Sunday

"Here is My Heart" tells the story of the playboy millionaire crooner who made love to a haughty princess and won the fair lady by fair means and foul.

Unable to meet the princess, with whom he had become infatuated at sight, the crooner buys the hotel in which she lives, disguises himself as a waiter, and croons love songs to her while he is serving the soup.

Before his courtship is successful, the crooner is inveigled into supporting the princess' useless entourage of amusing but wasteful nobles. And finally, although misunderstandings threaten their happiness for a while, the princess and the crooner fall completely in love.

Alison Skipworth, Roland Young, fresh from his Broadway triumph in "Her Master's Voice," and Reginald Owen, who will be remembered for his characterization in "Of Human Bondage," are prominent in the supporting cast.

"Here is My Heart" features a series of new tunes by Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin, authors of "Love in Bloom." They include "June in January" and "With Every Breath I Take."
