Medford basketball fans will get a chance to see the revamped Medford high school team in action again this week, when the Tigers attempt revenge on Grants Pass here Friday, Feb. 8, for the beating given them by the Cavemen 3 weeks ago in the climate city.

The Medford squad showed such a vast improvement last week over anything they have shown before, that fans are hoping the improvement will continue, and the team will win the remainder of their games.

PHOENIX GRANGE PLAY IS WINNER IN COUNTY FINAL

'The Valient' Will Be Presented in State Finals at Corvallis February 12—Play's Cast Rates High

A tense, dramatic story involving the death sentence of a murderer, splendidly acted under the direction of Kathryn Denzer, was chosen winner of the county dramatics contest in the finals last night at the Senior high school when judges awarded the highest number of points to Phoenix Grange's presentation of "The Valient," written by Holworthy Hall and Robert Middlemas.

This production, one of six presented in Jackson county during the last month as part of a state wide contest sponsored by the home extension service of Oregon State college, will be presented Tuesday, February 12 at Corvallis in the state finals, in which Josephine, Lane, Deschutes, Columbia, Multnomah and Clackamas counties will also be represented. Mrs. Mabel Mack, county home demonstration agent, was in charge of the three rural districts comprising the contest in Jackson county.

"The Valient" together with the two other plays entered in the finals, showed marked improvement over other presentations during the four years the contest has been sponsored. "Nancy Orr's Day," presented by Central Point Grange, and "Old Settler's Picnic," by Rogue River community, three other plays were eliminated in the semi-finals, January 28.

Second Time in Final

The prize-winning cast, which will be the second representation of Phoenix Grange, has sent to the state finals, "The Neighbors" having won both the county and the state championship two years ago, is as follows: Warden Holt, played by O. C. Maus; James Dyke, the convict, played by Robert Corliss; Father Daly, prison chaplain, played by Lester Newbery; Josephine Paris, the girl, played by Roma McReynolds; Dan, the jailer, played by George Drake, and an attendant, played by Floyd Bell. Besides the director, Kathryn Denzer, the prompter, Violet Bole, will make the trip.

Although "Nancy Orr's Day," largely through the praiseworthy acting of Faye Ritzinger as 80-year old Nancy Orr, was ranked a close second in the number of points awarded, "The Valient's" impressive plot was so well dramatized that in direction and acting merit it was outstanding. The judges were Mrs. Angus Bowmer, Ashland; Miss Louise Howard, Grants Pass and Rev. W. R. Baird, Medford.

Headed by the admirable work of O. C. Maus as the warden of state's prison at Netherfield, Conn., the cast entered into the play with all the feeling and sincerity necessary to carry out the impressive plot, a difficult one to enact.

DANCE IN NUDE MAY BRING PROSECUTION FOR AMERICAN GIRL

PARIS, France, Feb. 5.—(AP)—A complaint by the National Alliance for increasing the French population against the nude dancing of Joan Warner, 22-year-old American entertainer, may result in the young woman's prosecution.

Officials studied the alliance's protest today and were expected to decide within a week whether to act against Miss Warner in their drive to clean up Parisian gaiety.

Stern treatment by the courts of "offenses against public morality" was recently urged by Georges Pernot, the minister of justice. His admonition reflected a wave of French indignation against Paris being pictured in the United States as a "naughty city."

Miss Warner, whose home was in Narberth, Pa., was ordered to cease her performances in a cheap Paris restaurant after police observed her "nude dance."

The young American protested her dance was so modest that she had been permitted to perform it in Chicago and Milwaukee. The climax of the dance, she explained, comes when she shakes off all her clothing except a chain, which she then drops immediately, cartwheeling from the floor so rapidly that the human eye can scarcely follow her gyrations.

Other Actors Shine

During the course of the three plays here by Dorothy Innman as Helen Orr and Ivan Skyrman as Donald Orr and in "Nancy Orr's Day," and by Bertha Lund as Lucy Miles and Tom Knox as Henry Miles in "Old Settler's Picnic."

During the program, witnessed attentively by more than 800 people, several selections were presented by the Whippies' orchestra, including two saxophone solos and a saxophone quartet number. Selections by the Jacksonvillians grange chorus were well received.

Casts of the two other plays which took part in the finals are as follows: "Nancy Orr's Day," directed by Edith Bohnert—Nancy Orr, 80 years young, Faye Ritzinger; Donald Orr, a son, Ivan Skyrman; Helen Orr, his wife, Dorothy Innman; Grace Orr, their daughter, Lotus Hessegrave; Barbara Guyer, a guest, Laurine Huggler; Mrs. Hina Skyrman, almost attainable, Roberta Pankay; Mrs. D'Arcy, the unattainable, Dorothy McGuire; Lucy, the maid, Peggy Lawrence; Charles Payne, Mrs. D'Arcy's nephew, Robert Sparks; Bishop McGregor, "Geordie," Harold Head.

"Old Settler's Picnic," directed by Edie Birdseye, with Genevieve Dick as prompter—Henry Miles, an old settler, Tom Knox; Lucy Miles, Henry's daughter, Bertha Lund; Tom Chapoten, in love with Lucy, Glenn Birdseye; Jim Birdseye, a neighbor, Victor Birdseye; Lizzie Speight, another neighbor, Glenna Hollister.
