ed in a pocket and grabbed that gun. He pointed it at me and I grabbed his hand," Frechette said.

"I don't know whether it was his finger or mine but the gun fired twice.

"I put him in the trunk and I didn't know whether he was dead or alive. I knew if I was caught I'd spend the rest of my life in prison."

Decided to Flee He said he decided to flee and attempt to get to China.

"I opened up the trunk and threw in his hat and a towel and threw the key away."

He said he drove to Pontiac and stayed there all night, returning the next day to Kalamazoo. That night, January 30, he said he went to "a movie" and about 10 o'clock the next morning he drove to a gasoline station, filled up the tank of the machine and started west.

Frechette, admitting he was an ex-convict, said he was imprisoned in 1928 because of attempted murder. He claimed he had been an airplane pilot and that while teaching a student to fly the pupil "froze" at the controls and "I had to hit him over the head with a hammer." He said he was granted parole in March 1933.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Feb. 7.—(AP) Clarence Frechette, held in California today for the slaying of his young employer, Robert Brown of Kalamazoo, was Michigan's first "flying bandit," and once described himself as a "rootin', tootin' flying glot."

The two men disappeared January 28, after they started to drive from Pontiac to Kalamazoo. The search for them became intensive last Monday after Mrs. Mabel Brown, mother of the victim, declared she believed her son had been slain, or was held against his will.

Authorities here said extradition of Frechette would be sought as soon as it had been determined where Brown was slain.

Sheriff Charles W. Struble said that while Frechette was quoted by California officers as saying he killed Brown in a quarrel over a young woman on the night of January 29, Brown had been seen at Howell, Mich., the following day.

The young woman, named by Frechette as Miss Grace Curran, 25, a Kalamazoo laundry worker, today delivered to Sheriff Struble a letter she received from Frechette Tuesday saying "you will never see me again. In time, you will find out why."

With the letter, she said, was a parcel post package which contained a ring and other jewelry, which she said she had allowed Frechette to carry with him. She said she had been friendly with Frechette for about two months, but that she had only met Brown, and was not well acquainted with him.

PHIL LOWRY NEW LEADER OF HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS

Excitement ran high at the local high school this morning when a reelection was called in the matter of choosing a student body president.

Phil Lowry, junior, led the balloting over Cyril Sander, 112 to 79. Due to slight difficulties in determining the students having the rights to vote, yesterday's election was called a tie. It was stated by the election board that both contestants were about on an even basis in the tally.

The position of associated student body president is one of great responsibility, according to students and faculty members. Lowry is the brother of David Lowry, former president of the student body in 1932, and now a student at the University of Oregon. The younger Lowry has long been a leader in student activities and it seems a natural step for him to this office.

The newly elected president has introduced a lengthy program which he will endeavor to carry out, and bring a new deal to the Medford high students.

Activities such as this further promote the idea of student government. It develops leadership as well as developing the traits of being a good follower. This system, which is in the honor type, has been installed in many public schools all over the country. It consists of the student council, a governing group, and the student court, a judicial body.

Russel Brown, just graduating, will leave the office of vice-president open, and a controversy is expected as to whether Cyril Sander, present business manager will have to give up his position because of his candidacy for president.

The SERA Interpretive geography class, which meets tonight in room 4 at the senior high school, is enthusiastically working out a new project, the compiling of an illustrated geography booklet. Different members of the class are handling subjects of particular interest to them. Data is included only as a basis upon which to base interpretive comments. All data is procured from the very latest sources, such as the current World Almanac.

Graphs and maps will be made by members of the class. The preface and introduction will be written by the teacher, Alice D. English. The students are finding the work fascinating, as well as instructive. Incidentally, the training which will accrue from the selection, arrangement and organization of material will be of great value to those participating. All are invited to visit or enroll. There is no charge.
