

NEUNER RELEASED AS ATTORNEY FOR RUM COMMISSION

Move Conforms with Policy of Martin in Ending Special Attorney Employment by State Departments

SALEM, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Arthur K. McMahan, chairman of the state liquor control commission, announced here today that the commission, conforming with the policy of Governor Charles H. Martin relative to the employment of special attorneys by state departments and establishing a policy for the liquor board, is dispensing with the services of George Neuner as special attorney for the commission.

"Mr. Neuner has been employed on a month-to-month basis and the action of the commission in relieving him is entirely agreeable to him," said McMahan.

Ran Canadian Liquor.

At the same time Chairman McMahan announced that the commission at its scheduled meeting here this afternoon would issue an order directing its administrator and purchasing agent, Frank A. Spencer, to purchase no more liquors from the British Columbia Distilleries company, from which the state has been buying Monogram and Deluxe Bourbon brands of whiskeys.

"We are informed by agents of the United States government that the British Columbia Distilleries company is now in litigation with the United States government over unpaid taxes and penalties on liquor illegal by the government to have been illegally imported into this country," said McMahan.

Times Unpaid.

"A suit is pending in the federal courts for the collection of these taxes and penalties and we are informed that two former officers of the company are fugitives from justice from the United States."

"Under such circumstances the commission does not feel justified in continuing to purchase liquors from a foreign corporation which flaunts and defies the authority and laws of the United States."

The liquor control commission would meet here this afternoon primarily for consideration of the policy to be followed by the commission in relation to pending legislation proposing amendments to the state liquor control act, with particular attention to be given to the changes recommended by the former commission.

Cocktail Bill Waits.

There was no indication as to what position the new commissioners would take with relation to the so-called cocktail bill to legalize the sale of mixed and hard drinks by the glass in hotels and restaurants, which is now in the hands of the house committee on alcoholic control.

The former commission made no mention of the "cocktail" bill in its recommendations to the legislature, although the proposal has been actively agitated by Portland hotel and restaurant men for several months.

Members of the new board expressed a generally favorable attitude toward the former commission's recommendation that all alcoholic beverages containing more than 3.6 per cent of alcohol be handled by the commission, with the state acting as wholesale distributor for beer and wines containing not less than 3.6 or more than 14 per cent alcohol.

They also indicated that they will oppose the pending bill to increase from 14 to 24 per cent the legal alcoholic content of wines which may be sold by the bottle or glass by restaurants and licensed retailers.

Wall St. Report

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Led by rails and industrials, stock market prices again moved into higher territory today. The pace was still slow, however, as many traders waited for further confirmation of the upturn. The closing tone was firm and transfers approximated $70,000 shares.

A rally in commodities, together with an apparently brighter outlook for business generally, helped to improve sentiment in the equities division. Rubber and hides developed strength, while grains and cotton came back. Secondary rail bonds found a substantial demand and the dollar firmed in relation to leading foreign exchanges. The commodity markets appeared to have shaken off their nervousness following advice that the difficulties of some London dealers were not so serious.

RUDY'S WIFE ILL; SUIT FOR HIGHER ALLOTMENT ENDS

Mrs. Valle, who is seeking more maintenance for the archaic case, expressed profound solicitude for Valle's well.

"We don't want him to die today," Sheridan said.

Then he rested his case, explaining: "Mrs. Valle is confined to her home under medical care, and this concludes the plaintiff's case."

The move greatly agitated Bushel. After spluttering and prancing about he requested a recess until 2 p. m. to prepare a motion. He did not disclose what his motion would be.

Valle carried. The courtroom quickly cleared, but Valle tarried.

He went up to the phonograph on which his records of conversations involving his wife had been played and put a record on but no sounds—either of voices or of music—were heard from the wheezy machine.
