CENOTAPH OF LINCOLN
And so they buried Lincoln? Strange and vain!
Has any creature thought of Lincoln hid
In any vault, 'neath coffin lid,
In all the years since that wild spring of pain?
This tale—no never in the grave hath lain.
You could not bury him although you slid
Upon his clay the Cheops pyramid
Or heaped it with the Rocky Mountain chain.
They slew themselves; they but set Lincoln free.
In all the earth his great heart beats as strong,
In all that while pulses throb to chirp-shall
And burn with hate of tyranny and wrong.
Whoever will, may find him, anywhere
Save in the tomb. Not there—he is not there!

CRIME CONFESSED BY ANOTHER MAN, IS SHOUTED CLAIM

king, no nation or no country can. There is no question about that. We could try this case forever. We could go on for days and days. We couldn't do anything for Colonel Lindbergh.

"But we could do one thing in this case, let me tell you. This jury can, by its verdict, do one thing for the colonel, for Anne, for the country. We can make the country a little bit more secure, we can make the children a little safer, we can make women a little happier.

"We can translate Colonel Lindbergh's loss and sorrow into some gain for civilization, to show that whether we catch a man walking into the room or not, we can crush these snakes. You can serve society so society will gain even at Colonel Lindbergh's loss."

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press.)
PLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 12.—(P) The state asked today that there be "no mercy" for Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

"You can't compromise with murder and murderers," said Attorney-General David T. Wilentz in his final plea to the jury to send Hauptmann to the electric chair for the kidnaping and murder of Baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

"If you get the feeling that this case is what Mr. (Edward J.) Reilly says, a perfect case, it is your solemn duty to find a verdict of murder in the first degree."

He described what he called a perfect case for mercy, and declared the Hauptmann case was not that kind.

Says Bruno Will Thaw.
"There may be some questions you can't answer," he gestured toward Hauptmann. "But there also a man who can answer them. He will be thawed out, he is cold, yet he will be thawed out when he hears that switch—that's the time he will talk."

Wilentz swept his hand toward Hauptmann's defense staff.
"There is nobody at that table who doesn't feel he is guilty. I don't care what they say."

He denied Reilly's contention that the state had to prove Hauptmann was alone in the crime.
"He could have had fifty help him if he participated in this murder that's all you've got to deal with."

"Might I ask," Wilentz addressed the court, "that so far as the defendant and his wife are concerned I may have the right to proceed without any demonstration from that quarter?"

No demonstration.
"You certainly may," said the court. "There is to be no demonstration or interruption of any kind, proceeding from any person. Let that be perfectly understood."

The attorney-general plunged immediately into his plea that Hauptmann be punished as the kidnaper and murderer of Baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. and first of the matched Defense Chief Edward J. Reilly's use of the biblical text, "Judge not, lest ye be judged," with another.

"He that killeth any man shall surely be killed, shall surely be put to death," he quoted.
"For all these months since October, 1934, (when Wilentz addressed the case), not during one moment has there been anything that has come to the surface of life that has indicated anything but the guilt of this defendant, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, and no one else," he went on.

Wouldn't Be American
Wilentz asked himself what type of man would commit the Lindbergh crime. He also answered himself:
"He wouldn't be an American. No American gangster and no American racketeer ever sank to the level of killing babies. It had to be a fellow with ice water in his veins. Not blood. It had to be the fellow that was an egomaniac who thought he was omnipotent. It had to be a secretive fellow that wouldn't tell his wife about his money. It had to be a fellow that could undergo hardships, the kind of a fellow that

U.S. EXPORTS OF PORK AND LARD
PORK LARD
1923 1926-29 1932-33 1934 (Estimated)

WITH exports of pork and lard from the United States still remaining at a low level, a large increase in hog production is warranted at this time, according to officials of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Exports of pork from the United States showed a slightly upward trend in 1934, but this was offset by a decline in exports in lard. Annual shipments abroad remain at about three-fourths of a billion pounds, as compared with nearly two billion pounds in the early post-war period. The decline during the ten years from 1923 to 1932, as indicated by the above graph, has been equivalent to about nine million hogs.

Great Britain, the principal market for pork products, continues to restrict pork shipments from non-empire countries, including the United States, by means of import quotas. Germany, second ranking buyer of hog products, limited monthly lard imports in 1934 to 40 per cent of the volume imported during the corresponding months of 1931-32, and during the latter part of the year imposed restrictions on conversion of German money into foreign exchange that caused further reductions in lard imports.

The 1935 corn-hog production control program now being offered by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is designed to help farmers keep hog numbers in line with the current low level of export trade.

He pointed out that only one handwriting expert testified for the defense, while the record shows he allowed many others to examine the Lindbergh ransom notes.

"Why aren't those other experts here?" he asked. "You know the reason. It's because they wouldn't dare say the handwriting was not Hauptmann's."

"I think they have got lots of money," he said of the defense. "Money coming from cranks and idiots and fools, un-Americans all over the country, pouring in enough money to hire what they consider the four best lawyers available. Certainly they wouldn't represent a murderer just to represent him."

EUGENE, Ore., Feb. 12.—(P)—Federal services will be held here tomorrow for A. M. Smith, 66, former mayor of Astoria, and an attorney in Portland for many years. He recently moved to a farm near Harrisburg. He died here Sunday.

LINCOLN BANQUET BIRTHDAY FEATURE

Today, Lincoln's birthday, found things quiet in downtown Medford, with banks, the federal building, the court house, the city hall and the state liquor store all closed. Gay flags decorated the streets, and a leaden sky distracted somewhat from the holiday air.

The celebration feature of the day is to be a Lincoln day banquet of the Republican club at the Lithia hotel in Ashland tonight at 8 o'clock. Most of the prominent Republicans of the valley will be present, and an interesting program has been promised, with the main address of the evening to be given by J. W. McInturff of Marshfield. Frank Van Dyke, city attorney of Ashland, will act as toastmaster.

The annual tea of the Lincoln Service club was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Lincoln school, and several other groups met in honor of the occasion.

DIG POWER SHOVEL OUT OF BASEMENT DEBRIS
The power shovel buried beneath falling timbers and bricks when the walls and ceiling of the Scott Davis building tumbled down upon it last Saturday night, was unearthed today, looking a little bit the worse for the experience, but still in good condition. The cab was knocked out of alignment, but otherwise the shovel was unharmed. It was stated by those in charge of the work at that building that had a person been sitting in the seat under the cab he would have escaped uninjured.

Workers are still busy cleaning away the fallen bricks and other debris.

Tickets for the annual Elks' club Valentine dance to be held at the temple Thursday night are now on sale. Secretary Ernest Scott announced today.

The party, for which decorations are being installed under the general management of Robert Strang, is to be given for Elks and their invited house guests only. Members of the lodge may purchase tickets for their guests from the secretary.
