

CAPITAL WHISPERS CROSS-PULL IRKS MINORITY LEADERS

Senator McNary's Western Liberalism Clashes With Eastern Philosophy of Snell, House Leader

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Backstage whispers in the capital hint that the relationship between the titular leaders of the republican minority in the senate and house is causing some concern.

There have been no indications that anything like an open break is threatening, but there have been rumors the leadership of the house is a bit impatient with that of the senate for its seeming reluctance to be more aggressive in backing the administration.

If such be true, much of the blame must be attributed to the difference in the political philosophy of the two G. O. P. generals.

Snell of New York, the house leader, is representative of the conservative east.

McNary of Oregon, the senate leader, on the other hand, typifies the liberalism of the west—not to the extreme—but further to the left than Snell.

Real Tests To Come
This was why republicans in the house, led by the New Yorker, struck out so boldly in their opposition to the administration's work relief bill while minority opposition in the senate seemed less organized and virile.

McNary is faced with another difficulty in regard to this measure, too. Democratic opposition to certain phases of the bill was strong and determined. It was necessary for him to wait and see what the democrats themselves did to their administration's own measure before he could form his plan of attack.

At that, however, the real test in both houses is yet to come. It is necessary to wait and see what disposition will be made of the measure after it emerges from conference.

The 1936 Election
There are other reasons why McNary may not be as enthusiastic in opposing the "new deal" administration as is Snell.

The Oregon senator comes up for reelection in 1936 at the time President Roosevelt will be seeking his second term. Snell already has been on the firing line since the advent of the "new deal" and won handily in his contest to return to the house in last year's elections.

McNary hasn't faced his electorate since 1930 when his party was in control of the national administration.

There is the added consideration which should be kept in mind as well. McNary looms as a possible choice for presidential or vice presidential honors in the G. O. P. ticket in '36. This alone tends to make a man in politics careful of his step.

OAK GROVE GIRL WINS AWARD FOR ESSAY IN NATION-WIDE CONTEST

Miss Marjorie O'ean Reich of Oak Grove school was pleasantly surprised yesterday when awarded one of the prizes of the nation-wide essay contest conducted by the General Mills Company of America.

The contest, entered by thousands of children of both grade and high school ages, ended December 10. The essay of Miss Reich covered the subject, "Why bread is good to eat four times a day," and was the outstanding essay submitted from the grade schools of Medford and vicinity. Miss Frances Combe of the local high school was also awarded a prize the first of the week but competed in the high school section of the contest.

Nationally prominent magazine contributors were judges of the contest and included Katherine Fischer, of Good Housekeeping; Alice Blinn, of the Ladies Home Journal, and Katherine Clayberger, Woman's Home Companion. They were impressed by the quality of the thousands of essays submitted and Miss Reich and Miss Combe are to be congratulated in winning prizes in competition of this kind and is also a tribute to the quality of training given by the schools of Medford and vicinity.

DIESEL ENGINES ACHIEVE FAVOR FOR MANY USES

That 1935 will be a "Diesel year" has been indicated during the last few months by a wide variety of indexes.

Stream-lined trains powered with Diesel engines, further progress in developing small units for use in heavy-duty trucks, continued adaptation of Diesels for stationary installations such as power generation plants, and above all, the improved financial showing made by Diesel engine manufacturers, are among the factors which have focused the spotlight on Diesel power.

The 1934 annual report of the Caterpillar Tractor company, made public a few days ago in its final form, touches briefly but significantly on the Diesel developments of this important company. President B. C. Heacock told the stockholders: "Constant progress has been made in improving Caterpillar products, consisting of track-type tractors, Diesel engines, a full line of elevating, blade and motor graders, and combined harvesters, particularly in this true in the case of Diesel engines."

Caterpillar Diesel engines are available in five sizes, from 130 horsepower down to 47 horsepower. They are used on the three largest Caterpillar tractors, on the largest grader, by a number of manufacturers of power shovels, hoists, crushers, industrial locomotives, air compressors and similar equipment, and are also becoming increasingly popular as power units for a wide variety of stationary installations.

Although the report does not go into detail, Caterpillar is known to have become a leader in Diesel production.

On a basis of aggregate horsepower, it produced 0.8 per cent of the nation's total Diesel output in 1931, 10 per cent in 1932, 42 per cent in 1933, and 31 per cent in 1934.

From 1933 to 1934, however, according to a reliable computation, the output of Diesel engines almost tripled, and that of Caterpillar more than doubled.

The significance of the increase in Diesel horsepower in America has been largely industrial, rather than agricultural, in the last two years.

Caterpillar's recent, greatly improved showing is due to a considerable extent to the machinery used by government agencies on public works program.

Comparatively few of its products have gone into agriculture. Recently the company made an arrangement with Deere & Company, for joint use of dealer outlets in the United States, which will give Caterpillar better access to farm users—H. W. Jimerson, financial editor The Examiner.

WAITING MANDATE IN ENRIGHT CASE

The supreme court mandate affirming conviction and sentence of T. J. Enright, attorney, under a driving-while-intoxicated sentence of 90 days in the county jail and a $100 fine, as yet has not been forwarded from Salem. Upon its receipt the district attorney will file an order of commitment and warrant for Enright to start serving his sentence. County authorities state it requires from two to ten days, for a mandate to be received from the clerk of the high court.

Friends of Enright are reported to have interceded in his behalf, without avail. It is also stated that the attorney has told acquaintances he is ready to start serving his sentence. Enright is under two convictions of intoxicated driving charges—once in justice court, and once in the circuit court. The justice court sentence of 30 days, was suspended upon payment of a $100 fine.

CIRCUIT COURT OPENS FOR FEBRUARY TERM ON MONDAY MORNING

February term of the circuit court opens Monday, with the calling of both the grand jury and the petit jury. Ordinarily a new grand jury is drawn at the opening of the court term, but the court may continue the present grand jury if it sees fit. Labors of the present grand jury have been light, with investigation of but few cases, one of them being the arson charge against the High brothers of Ashland. Both the criminal and civil dockets for the coming term are light.

The next grand jury session will be called upon to investigate the evidence in the case of Roster F. (Red) Carroll, service station employee, charged with involuntary manslaughter, as the result of an auto accident on West Main street, February 9 last, causing the death of June Rose Hansen, 13, of the Oak Grove district. A coroner's inquest verdict held Carroll responsible.

Civil suits scheduled for trial during the coming term include the suit of Everett Steeter against Mabel Birch and F. C. Abel, for alleged damages due to an auto crash on the Pacific highway last June, and Leland R. Skelton against the Gild Hill Irrigation district and others for alleged damages growing out of a ditch right-of-way, and the removal of a tree.

"I'm afraid the coffee was a bitter disappointment," Hal said later, as he emptied the ash trays and helped to clean up. "They hardly touched it. We ought to stop floating around from one kind to another, and go back to Hills Bros. Coffee. Nobody ever passes that up."
