Enrico Caruso Jr. at Craterian

A combination stage and screen entertainment starting today at the Craterian theatre for a three-day run, has Enrico Caruso, Jr., the son of the famous tenor, appearing in person on the stage in a program of songs and anecdotes of his great father, and personal charm that endeared his noted father to millions of music lovers.

"The Gilded Lily" shows Claudette Colbert as the pretty stenographer looking for a poor man to marry and help attain success, but who finds herself falling for a wealthy English nobleman, traveling in this country incognito. When she turns down his proposal of marriage, mostly because he is so wealthy, she finds herself overnight a country-wide celebrity as the "no" girl.

Through a rapid succession of merry episodes, she leads her millionaire Romeo a gay chase, only to realize that her heart lies with the "mug" she is wont to meet every Thursday night, sit on a bench in the park, eat popcorn and watch the world go by. Ray Milland, as the titled Englishman, and Fred MacMurray, as the park bench boy friend, are introduced as two comedians who will undoubtedly win many fans with their sterling performances in this picture.
