McALESTER, Okla., March 12.—(AP)—Under threat of a tear gas barrage, more than 200 men, women and children "hunger marchers" were ousted today from the courthouse where they had threatened to stay until they were given food, clothing and jobs.

Before they started to leave, the sheriff gave the leaders his personal check for $100 to purchase food, but insisted it was a donation and "not a bribe to leave."

As the jobless filed out of the building in small groups, deputies escorted them to the city limits. The ragged assemblage of whites and negroes had spent most of the night praying, singing hymns and listening to a negro quartet.
