

GERMAN PATRIOTS WOULD AID REICH IN BUYING MINES

Gold Trinkets Given Toward Purchases of Saar Properties — Funds Will Go for Relief in Region

By RUDOLPH JOSTEN

BERLIN. — (AP) — Sacrificial spirit such as could be noticed only during the World war, holds patriotic Germans in its grip now that the Saar basin has overwhelmingly voted for its reunion with the Reich.

The war-time slogan, "I gave gold for iron," reminded thousands of faithful Nazis of their duties toward their fatherland.

"Our gold for the black diamonds of the Saar," has become their present battle cry and by following it they hope to help the Reich buy back the rich Saar coal mines from France.

Gifts Go to Distressed.

In spite of the announcement by Joseph Buerkel, the Reich's Saar commissioner, that "arrangements have been made to safeguard the payment of the Saar mines without touching the gold and foreign currency reserves of the Reichsbank," voluntary contributions continue to flow from people in all parts of the nation.

It has been decided to use the money to alleviate distress among the returning Saar brethren and sisters. Ancient gold coins, gold watches, wedding rings, old brooches, pre-war 20-mark gold coins and other contributions are being sorted and sent to local Nazi party headquarters.

This sudden wave of patriotism was in no way fostered by the government or the Nazi party. "It broke out spontaneously and it's still spreading like wildfire," Nazi officials say.

"There is a formidable front of national solidarity including a great number of Germans residing abroad, to whom the return of the Saar means more than just an ordinary home-coming," official circles observe.

Pupils' Mite Sent to Hitler.

As a matter of fact, this "front" is growing day by day. Their deep concern about the possession by Germany of the rich Saar coal mines is expressed by contributions in kind and money.

Even children are possessed of the desire to help bear the Reich's financial burden. A voluntary collection started by pupils of a public school at Schwiebus yielded 50 marks, or more than $20, which the boys forwarded to Adolf Hitler, together with this letter:

"Dear Fuehrer: Please use this money to pay for the Saar mines."

Efforts by the Nazi welfare organization to preserve this "sacrificial spirit" for the benefit of the nationwide winter relief campaign failed. Therefore, it was decided to utilize these funds to relieve unemployment and need in the Saar.
