

BUSINESS LICENSE COLLECTION DRIVE BRINGS CITY $535

These three merchants and three milk dispensers are subject to arrest. Chief of Police Clayton McCredie said the arrests will be made when complaints are filed by the departments from which the various licenses were issued, and the violators will be taken before city court to be assessed nominal fines.

The drive was launched with the view of correcting the "deplorable" state of affairs which Mr. Fliegel described to the council in regard to license fee collections. He said that business men have been allowed to turn in these fees months late in the past, causing a considerable delinquency during the year. It is felt that the situation has been corrected, and that under the new ordinance license fees will be paid hereafter on the first of each year.

Other business to come before the council was appointment of a budget committee as follows: Harvey Fields, chairman; Elmer Childers, H. N. Hogan, W. S. Bolger, J. H. Fletcher, J. C. Collins, Eugene Thorndike, and George Phythian.

Mayor George Porter announced that H. A. Thierolf, a member of the water commission, has been reappointed to that position, his term having expired. It was voted by the council that the city will purchase an inhalator to be placed in the fire department for use in emergencies. The purchase, amounting to approximately $175, was made upon the recommendation of Fire Chief Roy Elliott and Health Officer Inskip, who pointed out that the inhalator nearest Medford at present is at Grants Pass.

The instrument which is used in conjunction with artificial respiration to supply oxygen, will be used in cases of drowning, shock, gas, accident, and hospital cases of anaesthesia where the patient fails to recover normally. It was pointed out by Dr. Inskip that the inhalator will be a great asset to the city. Upon the recommendation of Police Chief McCredie, a beer license to C. A. Brown, proprietor of the Gnome Inn, 323 East Main street, was authorized by the council.

The council approved the rezoning of a property on West Jackson street from class 1-B to class 2, for the remodeling of a residence into a hospital. The project will be carried out by Dr. Russell R. Sherwood and Dr. W. W. Howard.

VETOES BY MARTIN ESTABLISH RECORD FOR RECENT YEARS

Only 123 enacted additional laws to the statute books, while 19 old acts were repealed. The bulk, 48, were purely appropriation measures. And this mass of legislation, with few major issues, came out of a session which was noted by the unusual number of unique parliamentary mix-ups, large number of calls of the house, constant number of roll calls, and constant reconsideration attempts and explanation of votes. And credit should be given for the large number of laws not enacted.

Mortgage Bills Vetoed As predicted yesterday, the governor last night vetoed the two so-called deficiency judgment measures, senate bills 178 and 179. In disapproving these mortgage foreclosure bills which would permit the courts to determine values of mortgaged property on sale, the governor stated the attorney-general had ruled the change in procedure unconstitutional since they attempted to impair the obligations of contract.

Among the vetoes of late yesterday was house bill 355, hurried through in the closing day of the session, which would have permitted Multnomah county officials to levy a tax of a maximum of one-tenth of a mill to redeem outstanding scrip issued there during the relief emergency period.

Senate bill 323, which carried the governor's veto, would have provided that motor vehicle owners could receive a refund on license fees when the car is licensed in Medford before half of the license period had expired. Vetoed senate bill 385 would have made it unlawful for any individual or firm to change for services performed in connection with laboratory tests made by an institution maintained by public funds. Governor Martin vetoed senate bill 386, which would have suspended for two more years the provisions of a statute which exempted public officials for civil liability on expenditures for relief in excess of budget appropriations.

Vetoed Senate Act. In vetoing senate bill 308, Governor Martin refused his approval to a measure which attempted to state the purpose of a banking act of 1913 relating to the purchase and sale of securities by banks and trust companies, holding "the interpretation of an existing act was the duty of the court, not the legislature."

The appropriation of $4,000 for the state welfare commission under the bureau of labor was refused when the governor vetoed house bill 316. He held the bureau of labor should be purely self-sustaining. Vetoed house bill 329 would have authorized the state board of higher education to spend $10,000 in extending the benefit of the child guidance clinic of the University medical school to counties outside Multnomah county. He said "this is an educational bill which we cannot afford at this time."

The governor's partial veto was on house bill 328, which he approved with the exception of two items. One was an appropriation of $277 for the preservation of the John McLoughlin home at Oregon City. The second item was a portion of the $12,000 appropriation for the Oregon Humane society. He eliminated the $3,500 for the work in Multnomah county.

Free Ferry Bill Lives. Among the many bills filed with the secretary of state without the executive signature was one which would authorize the establishment of a free ferry across the Columbia river near Astoria. It was known as senate bill 75.

Senate bill 151, which provided for the giving of proof of financial responsibility by owners and operators of cars, was also filed without signature, as was the appropriation of $7,500 a year for the battleship Oregon. The governor had referred to the man-of-war as a "lemon" because by the state, and opposed the appropriation. Had he vetoed it, the continuing appropriation of $15,000 a year would have been reinstated. The governor filed with his approval the appropriation of funds for the operation and maintenance of the several agricultural experiment stations in Oregon. Another major bill filed without signature was house bill 480, which provided for the creation, operation and maintenance of flood control districts.

New controversial issues were disposed of yesterday, the most of these having received attention either earlier in the day or prior to the last day of consideration. Among the more important bills signed last night were:

Liquor Bills Signed. The two liquor bills, one changing the present liquor act to raise the alcoholic content of wine to 17 per cent by weight, and the companion bill which would provide additional revenue to the state by increasing the beer tax from 62 cents a barrel to $1.30 a barrel. Cities would get a portion and were prohibited from levying a stamp tax within their boundaries.

Providing the secretary of state's office be authorized to audit accounts and financial affairs of all municipal corporations. The bill providing for competition between finance companies and financial branches owned by manufacturers of automobiles.

The administration measure providing for employment of first offenders upon their parole from the penitentiary on relief projects for a period of time.

HIGHEST RANKING SCOUT OREGONIAN

SALEM, Ore. —(UP)—Reynold Feathers, Ore., senior student at Willamette university, is the highest ranking Boy Scout in the United States, he was informed recently.

Feathers, in nine and a half years membership, has accumulated 101 merit badges, 48 more than are required for the seven-point Eagle Scout ranking, usually the highest class attainable in scout work. A silver cup from the national organization is to be awarded him for his achievement. Feathers already has a quartermaster rank in Sea-Scouting, highest possible in Scout work, and is skipper of the Saratoga, Portland Scout flagship. In 1928 he was awarded a life-saving certificate for rescuing two persons from the Molalla river.

Feathers' rank, on which the merit badges are worn, is six feet long and still not large enough to accommodate 18 of his badges, which embrace 16 fields of activity.

Grappler Kayoed By Angered Fan

SALEM, March 20.—(AP)—A right to the jaw by a ringside fan felled "Barnacle" Bill Watkins to the canvas last night, and gave Bulldog Jackson two straight falls over the sailor in their wrestling match here last night. The Watkins fan climbed into the ring as Watkins was choking the Bulldog with a rope twist and put the sailor down for the count.

WIDE VARIETY OF COURSES OPEN IN U-O SPRING TERM

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE.—(Spl.)—Students who finished high school at mid-term, or others who have not previously enrolled in an institution of higher education, may enter the University of Oregon at the beginning of spring terms April 1, and find a wide variety of courses open to them. It was announced here today by Dr. C. V. Boyer, university president. The university operates on the three quarter system, and new comers start each quarter. In practically every department, it is pointed out. By supplementing the regular terms with summer sessions, students who enter this spring may be able to graduate with this year's class in 1935, and thus suffer no loss of time.

The spring quarter is regarded by many as the best of the year. The climate is ideal both for serious study, and for various recreational activities, such as spring sports and social events. A well-balanced program can easily be worked out for all students by the faculty advisors. Students who have been in attendance previously will have no difficulty in picking up where they left off, if they desire to return to the university for the spring term. Advanced courses are offered in nearly all departments which will be open to these students.

Monday, April 1, will be registration day for all students except those taking graduate work. Graduate students will have all of this week to enter without paying late filing fees. The late fees begin for other students April 2, when classes start.

Full information may be obtained by writing to the registrar of the university at Eugene.
