HIGHER PRICES ON GROCERIES UPHELD

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP)—In response to mounting criticism from consumers, Dr. Calvin Hoover, consumer's counsel of the A. A. A. said today higher food costs were justified by the benefits returned to farmers.

"It is possible that the present level of meat prices could last a year, he reminded, adding that they would probably continue high until some supply of livestock again began coming on the market."

Human Interest In "Grand Old Girl"

Rich in humor and emotional appeal, "Grand Old Girl" comes to the screen as a thoroughly delightful picture possessing exceptional human interest qualities.

This new picture, which opened yesterday at the Rialto theatre, centers around the story of an elderly school teacher who lives only for "the boys and girls."

Under the spell of May Robson's artistry, the character of Laura Bayles, gallantry courageous principal of Avondale high school, assumes heroic proportions.

As "Old Gunpowder," the fighter, she is magnificent. As the kindly counselor and ever sympathetic friend, she evokes tender memories in every mind. As the loyal public servant, faithful to her ideals of duty even at the cost of dismissal and the ignominious end of her career, she reaches right down into the heart of everybody.

Supporting performances are outstanding. Mary Carlisle and Fred MacMurray score convincingly in the youthful romance which runs through the story. Alan Hale gives a strikingly effective performance as Click Dade, a menace character who in the end proves to have a big heart.

Comedy and Melody Vie in "Mississippi"

The screen's leading exponents of song, comedy and beauty—Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields and Joan Bennett, respectively—vie for honors in "Mississippi," the new and gala musical film now at the Craterian theatre, and come off in a glorious tie that makes the picture a flood of mirth and melody.

"Mississippi" is a story of Dixie in the days when the ladies wore crinolines and the gentlemen didn't enjoy their morning coffee unless it had been preceded by a duel. Into this colorful and somewhat dangerous country comes Bing Crosby, a Yankee youth from Philadelphia, to claim the hand of his lady, played by Joan Bennett. He won't duel with his rivals for the lady's affection, not because he is afraid, but because he thinks the custom ridiculous.

Crosby is branded coward by the others and goes off with Fields, the captain of a river steamer in order to escape their taunts. Under the tutelage of the blustering old braggart, Crosby rapidly develops into a gun-fighting terror, billed all along the river as the singing terror.

The comedy climax of "Mississippi" occurs when Crosby discovers that he hasn't loved Gail Patrick but her little sister, Joan Bennett, all along. And she despises anyone who duels! So Crosby and Fields have to go to work undoing his reputation all over again.

PORK PROCESSING TAX TOLD IN SIMPLE FORM TO ERASE CONFUSION

CORVALLIS, (Sp)—Much misunderstanding and lack of information still exists among growers regarding their liability—or lack of it—for paying processing taxes on hogs slaughtered by themselves, reports Chas. W. Smith, emergency county agent leader and head of the educational campaign for the 1935 corn-hog program in Oregon. Reduced to their simplest form the rules might be stated as follows, he says:

The producer pays no tax when he slaughters hogs of his own raising and sells them dressed to commercial handlers. He pays no tax on slaughters of his own hogs for consumption by his family or employees.

Dressed hogs or hog products sold by the grower direct to consumers are exempt up to 300 pounds. On all over 300 pounds the tax must be paid, and if total direct sales exceed 1000 pounds in any marketing year the exemption is forfeited even on the first 300 pounds. The marketing year started last November 5.

Written records must be kept to obtain exemption, and these must show date, number slaughtered, live weight, weight of products sold and names and addresses of customers and estimated weight of home used products. Tax returns are filed with the collector of internal revenue at Portland in the month following the slaughtering.

STATE TO BOOST 'BUY OREGON' IN OWN PURCHASING

even Washington has a tariff on our goods and have guards at the interstate bridge to check goods going into the state," the governor declared.

Baker, in his discussion, declared "where can we start better in our campaign for sale of home products than with the head of the state? We are launching an educational campaign in the schools now and have the cooperation of Superintendent C. A. Howard and the Portland school district.

"We are not asking you to sell Oregon on sentiment but on quality, and we do produce quality. We are here only to ask the board of control to give full consideration to our taxpaying manufacturers at all times so we can build up payrolls."

"God has given us a whole lot in Oregon but man has damn near wrecked it," Baker concluded.

Urges Reasonable Prices
C. P. Bishop, Salem merchant and wool manufacturer, urged further that the state not "screw down on prices of Oregon goods, but to give the business at reasonable prices. During the past no manufacturer has made anything on sales to the state."

Holman interjected comments in furthering the discussion when he declared he "couldn't find a wooden bucket in the state," and that school children are taught the "cheese we eat is manufactured in New York."

E. M. Smith, business manager for the board of higher education at Corvallis, stated the institutions had specified cotton goods because they cost less, but that if the board decreed woolen suits they would be ordered and would be satisfactory. The institution had no objection, he added, but funds were low and the matter of price controlled the order.

The board unanimously ordered woolen swimming suits and sweaters would hereafter be purchased for students.
