INDIAN HISTORY TOLD ROTARIANS BY HEAD RANGER

Carlisle Crouch, chief ranger for Crater Lake National Park, addressed the Medford Rotary Club today at their weekly luncheon at Hotel Medford, on the early romantic history of the Indians of the southwest. The program was sponsored by Crater Lake National Park.

Chief Ranger Crouch opened his interesting talk by reminding the Rotarians that the recent depression has "made Americans America conscious" and predicted renewed interest on the part of the public in scenic attractions and early history of this country.

The Indians who made up the early population of southwest United States and Old Mexico, are of Asiatic Mongolian extraction, the speaker said, in describing the early migration through Alaska and down the Pacific slope to the warm, fertile lands of the southwest. In 1540 the Spanish expedition headed by Coronado made its exploration and invasion of Mexico, and then followed a series of bloody conflicts which were climaxed in 1680 in the subjugation of the Indians.

The contributions made by the early Indians of North and South America to present day civilization, include many of our agricultural products now extensively used, including corn, rubber, long staple cotton, tobacco and Irish and sweet potatoes. Weaving, the making of pottery and adobe construction were also originated by the early Indians.

Mr. Crouch described the construction of ancient Pueblo cliff dwellings likening the first Pueblo village to present-day apartment houses. One of these great composite villages in the southwest reached the amazing size of 800 rooms, together with many and ceremonial halls. The cliff village in Mesa Verde national park has 200 living rooms and 23 ceremonial rooms, all constructed in one cave. Chief Ranger Crouch pointed out that the Pueblos built these unique cave dwellings in the great canyons of Mesa Verde as protection from the attacks of warlike Nomadic tribes.

Mr. Crouch held the position of chief ranger for Mesa Verde national park before coming to southern Oregon to assume similar duties for Crater Lake national park.

CUBE BUTTER IN RECORD ADVANCE

PORTLAND, April 9.—(AP)—Practically record advance in the price on cube butter during the late season of the produce exchange was far more sentimental than created by any actual menacing shortage in the local supply. Advances of 3 to 3 1/2 cents a pound were scored during the session, considered a mere echo of California's latest downpour with resulting damage by floods.

Advance of 3c lb. in the buying price on butterfat, gives the producer a break although the higher price scored by one classification was greater than the percent obtained by the producer.

Beats in the egg market was showing a change with sales being made at a higher price for the large stock, a practice recently discontinued locally insofar as the exchange was concerned.
