

RUMPLER PLANS PLANE TO CARRY 170 PASSENGERS

German Inventor Claims Ship Would Cross Atlantic 18 Hours—Entire Plane Is One Enormous Wing

By H. A. Peters

BERLIN.—(UP)—The disaster to the U. S. navy's airship Moons has revived speculation here as to the ultimate worth of lighter-than-air craft and has thrown into sharp relief the plans of a German inventor for a 170-passenger heavier-than-air flying boat designed to cross the Atlantic from Hamburg to New York in 18 to 19 hours.

The designer is Engineer Dr. E. Rumpler, builder of the famous Humber-Taube fighting planes of World War fame and of a dozen other types of plane.

Little Air Resistance
The chief advantage claimed for the Rumpler trans-ocean plane is its lack of air resistance. Viewed from the front, it is merely one enormous wing mounted on two pontoons which taper back to the tail-steering fin.

Equal load distribution is the second prime feature of the plane. Engines—there are ten, each of 1,000 h. p.—passengers and express are all inside the wing, which is high enough to accommodate a man standing, and which has a spread of 290 feet. The wing is 41 feet from front to rear.

Dr. Rumpler says he has achieved decentralization. Instead of a cabin in the middle, with other weights such as motor, fuel, pay load, as in the average plane, which puts too much strain on the wings, he has built a wing strong enough to carry the entire load equally distributed.

Plane's Interior
The interior of the wing looks like a Pullman corridor. It is divided from end to end. On the port side are passenger accommodations much like those of a train, with portables facing the direction of flight. Behind are the 10 engines, each with its own attendant and operated independently, with its own air-blade propeller. The plane would cost $1,000,000. The second and third would cost approximately $800,000.

Such a plane could reach Honolulu from San Francisco in 12 hours with a useful load of 70 tons, and could conceivably push on from there to Manila in 22 hours. It also would be invaluable to British interests as a link with India and the colonies, a fact which recently has attracted a British syndicate to inquire about the patents.

DRIVER ON RIGHT HAS INTERSECTION RIGHTS UNDER NEW MADE LAW

SALEM, Ore.—(UP)—Who has the right of way when two motorists drive into an intersection? Right now it's the driver who enters the crossing first.

But after June 12 the motorist in the vehicle on the right will have the right of way at all times, just as was always the case before 1931.

This was the warning of Secretary of State Earl Snell who said copies of the new motor vehicle laws would be ready for distribution in two months. The last legislature repealed the "first in the intersection" law which replaced the original right-of-way law in 1931.

Another new law passed by the last legislature—the Safety Responsibility act—will also become effective June 12, Snell said. "This law is designed to promote safety on our streets and highways by eliminating therefrom the driver who has been held responsible by the courts for the death or bodily injury of any person or for damages to property of others, but has not made adequate settlement," Snell explained.

If a driver does not pay a court judgment he loses his license and car registration until he can give proof of his financial responsibility or by taking out insurance or posting a bond.

The safety Responsibility act is in effect in 20 states in various forms, and is an important part of the uniform motor vehicle code as adopted by the National Council on Street and Highway Safety, Snell said.

OWL, HAWK AND CROW NATURE'S AGENTS FOR CONTROL OF RODENTS

SALEM, Ore.—(UP)—Owls, hawks and crows are nature's agents in the control of rodents and insects and warned the federal department of biological survey, and any concerted attempt to effect their extinction will cause heavy losses to farmers.

variety, which lives almost exclusively on gophers, ground squirrels, rabbits and field mice. Owls also prey on the rodents.

The great horned owl, Cooper's hawk, the sharp-shinned hawk and the goshawk, however, are the "criminal element" of the group, and destroy wild life and poultry that is allowed to run loose. The bureau urged discrimination in the drives against the birds, and offering protection to the short-tailed hawk and the long-tailed sparrow hawk.

HAMILTON, Ont.—(UP)—The quintuplet goats born on the farm of J. Rose inside the city limits, are attracting considerable attention here. The five kids are entirely normal and in excellent health.

Utah May Have Third Party
SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—(UP)—A third political party in Utah is expected to come from the dissatisfaction expressed toward the all-Democratic legislature's handling of the social, liquor, and labor problems.

Cat Likes Beer, Spurns Milk
CLEVELAND.—(UP)—Mickey, the slump white cat owned by Mrs. Josephine Bullock, likes beer and hates milk. Although he imbibes freely, he has never, says Mrs. Bullock, been "in his cups."
