ABSALOM, ANCIENT DEMAGOGUE, CITED IN PASTOR'S TALK

Speaking from the topic "The Sobs of Broken-Hearted Parents," Sunday morning at the local Church of the Nazarenes, Fred M. Weatherford, pastor-evangelist, took as his character theme Absalom, the son of David, in part, he said.

"From the 18th to the 19th chapter of 2 Samuel is a portrayal of our thinking this morning.

"Of Absalom it was said 'in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty.' As a physical specimen there was no blemish in him. He was especially characterized by his dense flowing hair.

"The evidence is too prominent for doubt that David had weakly indulged his son Absalom by sparing the rod during his boyhood. He spared the sword when Absalom murdered his brother. The end of Absalom's softness sooner or later ends in shame and disgrace.

"Absalom in his later years of maturity sought even by warfare to take his father's throne. In his covetous ambition it is said of him that 'he rose up early.' If the early morning appeals to the enthusiastic intrigue of the traitor, will the servants of the living God sleep away their opportunities? Picked inactive religion is the road to stagnation.

"The blaring temerity of the demagogue knows no limitations. He is like his father, the devil, whose business it is to out the other fellow in order to make room for himself. He misleads the people by great glowing promises of an earthly Paradise and an open road to Heaven. He would give to the head of every family in America $2500 annually. Such promises should be put in the pigeonholes of contempt and forgetfulness. The demagogue will do no more than strew the Broadway with human wreckage by his false light on the turnpike down to hell.

"People who have grievances or grudges are in a temper of mind to receive the seductive speeches of an Absalom. They are ready to set sail for any port in a storm.

"The Bible repeatedly sets forth the truth that the conniving demagogue is inevitably fed the fruits of his own serving. Absalom was slain on the battlefield in an effort to take his father's kingdom. Haman was hanged on the scaffold which he had erected to execute Mordekai.

"You cannot bury murdered men and avoid the hand of the Reaper of Justice. The penalty must either come through penitence or execution. God takes care of His law."

BARON GINSBERG MEETS BICKERTON ON ARMORY CARD

Colorful Benny "Elon" Ginsberg, 215-pound mauler from New York, will meet a Canadian rival just as big and tough as he is next Thursday night at the Armory when he tangles with Eric Bickerton, highly-touted meanie, promoter Lillard announced today. Their match will feature a card which will also include a return bout between Casey Columbus, gentleman grappler, and Jim Healy, burly San Franciscan, this bout being slated at Healy's request.

The appearance of Ginsberg and Bickerton is arousing considerable interest among members of the local wrestling fraternity, as neither has come to Medford before. Ginsberg, a New York Austrian-Jew, is one of the most unusual wrestlers on the coast, with his gaiter and peculiar technique. He is a recent arrival in the northwest, having appeared in a few headline bouts at Portland and Seattle. The promoter spent considerable time looking for a suitable opponent and believes that he has secured the best match in many months.

Healy, who has recently turned mercenary in a big way and is bad medicine for any wrestler, suffered defeat at the hands of the smooth-wrestling Colombo last week, but is now confident that he knows how to handle the big ex-wrestler from Hollywood. Casey was always a jump ahead of Healy, even on rough stuff, last Thursday night, so the San Franciscan will probably behave badly this week in an effort to even the score.

Karloff Heads Cast 'Rialto Horror' Hit

Box office records that have stood for years were broken yesterday at the Rialto theatre where "The House of Frankenstein" opened its local run, with Karloff again in the role of the monster. Following the example set by other cities where the picture has already played capacity crowds stormed the doors to get a new "high" for other pictures to follow.

As before, Karloff is starred as "The Monster" and gives a truly remarkable characterization of the menacing, lumbering brute, savage and yet filled with misandrous kindness. In spite of his ruthless crimes, he is at all times an object of sympathy and pity. The picture is a triumph for this fine actor, and his terrifying makeup is by long odds the screen's most horribly fascinating example of the cosmetic art. Karloff's supporting cast includes many such talented players as Colin Clive, Valerie Hobson, O. P. Heggie, Ernest Thesiger, Elsa Lanchester, Una O'Connor, Dwight Frye and E. E. Clive.

Jeonette MacDonald In Craterian Revue

Jeonette MacDonald, heroine of "The Merry Widow" and Nelson Eddy, noted American baritone who demonstrates that he is destined to be one of the screen's great new leading men, are teamed in a delectable blend of drama, romance and music in "Naughty Marietta," film translation of the Victor Herbert masterpiece, which opened yesterday at the Craterian theatre.

Retaining the gorgeous music of the operetta, the picture is produced as a thundering drama of New Orleans of the Creole days, with the famous "Marriage Auction," the savage battles between troopers and pirates, the importation of the Choquette Girls and other vivid detail. Settings and costumes are gorgeous, old St. Louis of the period and its people being reproduced on a lavish scale.

Miss MacDonald plays the French princess who, to escape a marriage of state, flees to the New Colony of Louisiana where she meets her romance in the British captain, played by Eddy. Clever dramatic artists both, with gorgeous singing voices, they make a perfect team.

W. S. Van Dyke directed the picture, injecting many artistic touches. The battle sequences are especially thrilling. Elsa Lanchester is intriguing as the wife of the governor, playing with whimsical comedy by Frank Morgan.

The huge replica of old St. Louis, the palace of Paris, and the great governor's ball are among the spectacular highlights, artistically photographed.
