

SONS MUSICIANS PLEASE AUDIENCE IN CONCERT HERE

One of the outstanding events sponsored by the Music Teachers association of Medford as its contribution to the observance of National Music week, was the program presented Thursday by the Southern Oregon Normal orchestra, and string quartet under direction of Miss Lucie Lauden, head of the violin department. The same program, with a few minor changes, was given in Ashland Sunday afternoon opening National Music week in that city, and the audience was enthusiastic over the splendid work accomplished by Miss Lauden and all those participating in the concert.

Local interest centered around the appearance of Miss Margery Paley, talented young artist, who is a Medford girl, and who played a charming solo group with piano accompaniment and was soloist with the orchestra. Miss Paley chose the first movement of the G Major Concerto by De Beriot as the musical offering.

A second group of delightful violin numbers was played by Miss Nancy Jean Gaston, student from Grants Pass. Miss Paley and Miss Gaston both play with precision and accurate intonation and their phrasing is musical and pleasing.

The work of the string quartet was especially interesting in that it gave evidence of the conception of classic form, musical phrasing and such other qualities as are fundamental in the string quartet. This talented student organization gives much promise for the future, both as an educational factor and also as a medium of opening new fields of musical culture.

Miss Landen, besides directing the ensemble and being a concert violinist of outstanding ability, played the piano accompaniments and proved herself a most proficient and satisfying accompanist.

RELIEF RACKETS INVADE OPEN SEA SAY LINER CREWS

ABOARD S. S. SANTA ELENA, en route to California.—(UP)—"Relief racketeering" has spread to the high seas. Many ships ply trade lanes past the Bahamas report that during the past year the inverted emerald international signal of distress—has been sighted in these waters.

The "distress" ship usually is a banana schooner, or a sponge fisherman. Putting a small boat overboard and halting passing craft, the "spongers" refrain is usually the same. His craft, short-provisioned for a short, inter-island passage, is becalmed. His crew, foodless for several days, is starving. The water butts are empty and there is not even tobacco aboard.

Investigation invariably proves the truth of such claim, shipmasters say. And age-old etiquette of the sea obliges the halted ship to break out stores for the "distressed" mariners, without cost. When the mercy craft has passed the becalmed craft catches the first breeze and returns rejoicing to her port.

It is something new in piracy, captains declare. Naval vessels, both British and American, have been distress-signaled, as well as merchantmen under various flags. And the nice part—from the canny schooner-man's point of view—is that nothing can be done about it.
