AD IN NEWSPAPER MEANT FOR EYES BOY'S KIDNAPER

Last night to ask the way to the Olympic highway was the missing George Weyerhaeuser of Tacoma. They talked with each of the two men in the front seat, both about 28 or 30 years old and "exceptionally well dressed," Ed Queener said. In the back seat, the boy was seated between a woman and another man. The party appeared extremely nervous.

On returning home a few minutes later, they saw a large newspaper picture of the missing boy, and were excited immediately over the likeness. The car stopped beside them in the industrial district here, off the main highway, and drove by them once before inquiring the way. It was a blue sedan with a trunk on the back and carrying California license plates (believed to be a Chevrolet).

"Where's highway 11 (Olympic highway)?" one of the men in the front seat asked. "Well, make sure this time for the woman in the back seat broke in. Her companion nudged her to stop talking. On being told the directions, they drove away. Later, the Queeners gave their information to authorities here and a widespread search was immediately begun. It continued through the night without success.

Goat Didn't Like Window GLACIER PARK, Mont.—(UP)—People who live in glass houses better steer clear of one Rocky Mountain goat. Recently a ram strolled up to the front of Many Glaciers Hotel here, gazed belligerently at his reflection in a huge window, lowered his head and rammed through. He repeated the process enroute out from the hotel lobby.

Butter Advance SOON WIPED OUT

PORTLAND, Ore., May 28.—(AP)—There was a quick reversal of butter prices on the produce exchange with a return of the bearish interest to the market. Despite the keen call for butter, the previous advance of 1 1/2 lb. for all scores except first was eliminated. The price on butterfat was automatically cut, with the decline in butter. Market for eggs showed a generally unchanged price and tone for the day but demand was favorable despite recent talk of a stoppage of demand for movement into store. There was weakness in the market for heavy hens at the late price declines but leghorns were practically steady with the greater call for storage than the trade has been able to supply.

Wall St. Report NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP)—The stock market suffered a relapse today as traders and investors groped for light on the adverse NRA decision and the French financial crisis. Metals and other issues which may be affected by invalidation of the codes, led the decline in which losses ranged from 1 to around 6 points. The close was weak. Transfers approximated 2,350,000 shares. Intermittent selling surges put the ticker tape several minutes behind floor transactions and occasional recoveries were brief and unimpressive. The utilities and scattered merchandising issues were resistant thruout and the rails stood up fairly well until late dealings. While the grains gave ground only moderately, most other commodities, including cotton, sugar, hides, rubber and silk pointed decisively downward. Bonds were irregular, but not too heavy. Foreign exchanges were mixed.
