Who established a postoffice: I'll tell you why—So all the neighbors could get their mail.

Without going to Woodville through mud and hail; But since Mrs. Lamb, there's many a rural free delivery route encircle this range.

A man named Martin carries the mail. Brings letters and packages in all sorts of weather. Distributes ad news and cheer and altogether.

Wears out a Ford car about once each year. Because on these roads there's great wear and tear.

Now Oregon has a farm organization called the Orange. And they are to be thanked for this great change.

They put rural free delivery in to day. To change the monotony so dreaded in farm life. Promote much happiness and end all strife.

Now at Winter, the Orange is called Enterprise. The oldest in the county called Jackson.

They worked and planned, glad light in their eyes. An ambitious and neighborly faction. A nice hall was the result of their action.

Where farmers could meet and enjoy life; Sing, dance, be merry and forget all strife.

The membership is composed of quality folks. Who attend all meetings, sing songs. Discussing farming, stock raising and problems—all.

Conceive ways to keep members from going to the wall. In times like these. So if you please, Come and be welcomed at Enterprise Hall.
