

FISHERMEN LEAVE LOWER ROGUE AS CLOSURE RESULT

State Policemen Patrol Stream to Enforce Rule—Canneries Still Handling Hook and Line Catch

GOLD BEACH, Ore., June 12.—(AP) The lower Rogue river reverted to Oregon sportsmen today.

Under order of the state fish commission, the much-debated strip between the jaws of the stream and Lobster creek, nine miles inland, was closed to commercial fishing at midnight last night.

Five state policemen were on hand today to see that fishermen were using only hook and line as provided by the recent legislation, and already several fishing boats have left the river to seek other climates.

The river was ordered closed last month, to be effective June 12, under the state statute which empowers the fish commission to bar commercial fishing on any Oregon stream when deemed essential.

The legislature this year passed a measure closing the stream for the third time. Before a referendum on the action was held, however, the matter is regarded as settled, until and unless the fish commission after completion of its survey, finds the river is not being detrimentally depleted by continued commercial fishing.

Two sports canneries were still being operated here today, since the new state law provides that fish caught in the Rogue with a hook and line can be sold. It is not known whether the catch in this manner will be sufficient for continued operations, however.

Sportsmen have contended commercial fishing has resulted in a greatly reduced run of salmon on the Rogue and have declared tourists who formerly made annual pilgrimages to Gold Beach have stopped coming here because of poor catches.

Cannery interests have stated commercial fishermen do not take enough fish to warrant closing.

The upper Rogue through eastern Curry, Jackson and Josephine counties, has been closed for several years. The stream has been properly posted, notices have been filed at the courthouse and prosecution will result for anyone found to be fishing the stream with other than hook and line, M. T. Hoy, master game warden of Portland, has announced.

NEW YORK, June 12.—(AP) Despite its dramatic prospects and the probability it will be a surprisingly hard fought match, the world's heavyweight championship fight between Champion Max Baer and Challenger James J. Braddock, tomorrow night, has failed to arouse either the fine frenzy of excitement or the sharp differences of opinion generally associated with such momentous flistic affairs.

It may not be a financial flop, all things considered, but it certainly lacks drawing power. Madison Square Garden's promoters predict a "gate" of $350,000 at their Long Island City bowl, but on the basis of advance sales they appear to be optimistic. It may not exceed $250,000.

P. E. O. Sisterhood State Convention Opened in Salem SALEM, Ore., June 12.—(AP) More than 300 delegates and members of the P. E. O. Sisterhood arrived here today for the opening of the state convention which will continue through Friday. Election and installation of officers will constitute the final day's program.

Miss Mabel Doud, supreme president of the organization; Mrs. Veda Jones of Portland, supreme treasurer, and Dr. Florence Boehmer, president of the Cottage Junior college at Nevada, Mo., were among the distinguished visitors in attendance. Mrs. Jessie Edwards Dodge of Ashland, president of the state group, will preside over the secret sessions.

Date For Wedding Of Carvel Reames to Ralph Green Set

Miss Carvel Reames, the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Reames of 27 Geneva, and a member of one of the valley's oldest and most prominent families, has named June 25 as the date of her wedding to Ralph Green, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Green of 701 Park avenue.

The wedding service will be held at noon at the Reames' home by the Rev. Ralph Peterson of the First Presbyterian church. Miss Clarita McCormick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. McCormick recently of Georgia, with whom Miss Reames attended the University of Oregon, will be her only attendant. Emil Mohr, son of Mrs. Emil Mohr, will be best man.

Mrs. C. O. Larson, who will play the wedding march, will also sing preceding the ceremony.

The bride-elect, who has been much feted in her social set since news of her betrothal, was the inspiration today of a lovely luncheon and linen shower, given by Miss McCormick at her home. Invitations were issued to 16 members of the younger set.

Maurine Duncan Wed In Garner, Iowa, is Word Word was received here today from Fontanelle, Iowa, that Maurine McCuire Duncan of Medford and Jay J. Vendelboe of Garner, Iowa, were married Sunday afternoon in a ceremony performed by Rev. S. E. Wright, Congregational minister, at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. W. H. McClure, at Fontanelle, Iowa. Twenty-four guests were present.

Mrs. R. E. Green of Medford, who is visiting her parents in Fontanelle, was present. Mr. and Mrs. Vendelboe left Sunday evening for a wedding trip to Hot Springs, Ark., to visit a cousin of the bride and will soon make their home at Garner, Iowa, where Mr. Vendelboe is Smith-Hughes agriculture teacher in the high school.

Mrs. Vendelboe taught music in junior high school at Medford in the school year 1929-30, then in August, 1932, came back to Medford to make her home for three years. She left Medford May 12 to visit in Iowa.

Miss Edith Hoppin Enns Vacation Here Miss Edith Hoppin of Columbus, Wis., left this morning by train, continuing an extended vacation trip, after visiting here for some time with her niece, Mrs. I. D. Canfield.

Mrs. Hoppin is making a tour of the states, having visited Yellowstone and Yosemite national parks before coming here. She is visiting the local gun club, also was grounds ready and he became so impressed in the work that he could not forget an important city council meeting. He recalled his official city duties in time, however, to get to the council without being late.

Spectator Issued. Mayor Porter issued a cordial invitation to the public to attend the tournament and President Daniels emphasized that no charge will be made for admission at any time during the meet.

SHOTGUN ARTISTS OPEN COMPETITION HERE TOMORROW

grounds were completely ready and the shoot could start immediately, if necessary.

Mayor George W. Porter, vice-president of the local gun club, also was on hand to assist in making the grounds ready and he became so impressed in the work that he could not forget an important city council meeting. He recalled his official city duties in time, however, to get to the council without being late.

Mayor Porter issued a cordial invitation to the public to attend the tournament and President Daniels emphasized that no charge will be made for admission at any time during the meet.

A velvety soft, refreshingly green enclosure has been furnished with cushioned chairs and settees for the comfort of spectators and meals and refreshments will be available at the clubhouse. A large bulletin board will keep visitors posted on the progress of the events.

With new equipment installed there are now seven trap-homes ready for the contestants, six regular traps, one for practice. A visiting expert described the layout as one of the best he has ever seen in the country.

With well over $3000 in cash and trophies to shoot for, scatter gun artists have registered for the meet from Oregon, California, Washington, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and British Columbia.

D. V. McGary, rated as one of the best shots in Canada, is due to arrive for the meet tomorrow by plane. Other gunners from the Canadian province are also coming by air.

While here they will extend to the competing gunners an invitation to register for the Pacific Indian shoot to be held in July at Harrison Hot Springs, British Columbia. It is expected that Mr. McGary will encounter some stiff competition here, for the tournament has attracted many of the highest rated scatter gunners in the west.

The Medford club, of course, will be well represented by a large contingent of expert breakers, who are determined to keep at least some of the cash and trophy prizes in this city.

Charles Doehendorf, mayor of Stanwood, Washington, will be in charge of the complicated task of castrating the shoot, ranked as one of the best castrators in the country. Mr. Doehendorf will be assisted by Al Hibel, Portland professional.

The meet will open tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock with the Oregon state skeet championships. There will be 50 skeet targets and championship trophies will be awarded to the winner and runner-up. A trophy will also be awarded to the high gun on each 25 targets, as well as a trophy to the winner and runner-up in the junior skeet championship for shooters of 18 years and under.

Tomorrow afternoon will be devoted to practice shooting which will serve as warming up exercises for the experts who will swing into action Friday. After tomorrow day's session will open promptly each morning at 8:30, President Daniels announced.

All supplies for the tournament were on the grounds by noon today. Two watchmen will guard the supplies and equipment every night of the meet and traffic to the club will be directed by state trooper, Mr. Daniels said. Charles Leith, manager of the Portland Gun club, is serving as manager of grounds and traps.

Officers of the Medford Gun club are T. E. Daniels, president, Mayor George W. Porter, vice-president, and E. W. Pesse, secretary-treasurer. Special committees have been appointed to assist the officers in conducting the big tournament with the efficiency and smoothness characteristic of the local club.

Prepare for Inflation Babson Warns Business

BOSTON, June 12.—(AP)—Roger W. Babson, widely known statistician, today warned business men to prepare for inflation.

"Quit worrying, forget Washington. Prepare for inflation," he said in a speech prepared for delivery at a Boston chamber of commerce luncheon.

Inflation of some kind surely is coming," he said. "Our dollar now is worth only 60 cents abroad. It is only a question of time when it will be worth only 50 cents or much less in the United States."

"Ninety-five per cent of property owners and the great majority of you business men are worrying about inflation when you should be preparing to profit from it. Certainly it is as foolish knowingly to expose one's self to inflation as to smother or other contagious diseases."

"A very practical hedge against inflation is to put your money into real property and protect it. Factories, stores, apartment houses and other buildings, which can be used for productive purposes, will be in great demand; but every kind of real property should prosper under inflation."

Labor disputes will tremendously increase during a period of inflation. It is absolutely essential to hedge against them by treating one's employees, both as to wages and working conditions, fairly and yet not extravagantly."

Babson said the chief lesson to business men "from the events of the past two weeks" is to "forget Washington, settle down and 'saw wood,' write down and 'saw wood.'"

KIDNAPER'S BRIDE CLAIMS ATTORNEY THREATENED HER

The kidnaper left after remaining 15 minutes. She next heard from him through a man she knew only as McGrave, a prisoner in the Denver jail, who brought her a note, she testified.

Told To Move "The note said: 'Clara, in my brown grip there is money. Give this man $200. I am in jail. There is nothing you can do for me. Move, Signed, George.'"

"We found the bag. It was locked. He took a knife and cut it open. I took out $200 in $20 bills and gave it to him. Then he left."

"After McGrave left, what did you do?" "We were frightened."

"My son, Edward and me. We had some money and didn't know what to do. George said move, so we packed. Then we went toward Laramie, Wyo. But we turned off before we got there and went to Cheyenne. We stopped at tourist camp there."

Then, Mrs. Feldman said, she remained there "four or five days" while her son made repeated trips, presumably to Denver.

On one of the trips, she said, he took with him some $12,000 of the ransom cash, which she counted out and prepared for him.

"What did you do with the rest of the money?" "He was asked."

"We buried it in two thermos jugs between Laramie and Cheyenne, about 25 miles west of Cheyenne at a place about 50 feet from the road, near a clump of trees."

"Did you retain any of the money?" "Yes, about $15,000."

"Who assisted you in burying the money?" "My son. Then I gave him about $10,000. He carried it in a belt around his waist."

"Where did you go when you left Cheyenne?" "To Chicago."

Mrs. Feldman testified she and her son remained in Chicago for a month or six weeks and then went to Portland, Oregon.

After their return to Denver, she went with him to see "my husband's lawyer in Denver."

"Who was he?" asked Dudley. "Ben B. Laska."

Gave Attorney Auto She said it was the first time she had seen the Denver attorney and that he assigned to him the title of her car "because he said he needed the $2000 he could get from it for expenses."

A notary public, she said, witnessed the document. The government attorney read the notary's name, Faith Olson.
