Theatrical and Amusement

Mae West on Craterian Bill

Nothing daunted, Mae West follows, sweeping men out of her way all along. There is still no response so she decides she must acquire a society veneer in order to capture him. How this determined lady gets what she goes after, and how Cavanaugh is brought around to admitting he loves her, is brought out in the climax. Some of the other men who follow the usual procedure of trying to "gum up and see her" include Ivan Lebedeff, Tito Coral, Monroe Oswald, Fred Kohler and Grant Withers.

Jimmy Dunn in Rialto Cast

Laughter and thrills are mixed together in "The Daring Young Man," at the Rialto theater for today and Monday. It is the hilarious story of a New York newspaper man (James Dunn) who never tires of expressing his sarcastic views of marriage until he meets Mae Clarke, a reporter on a rival paper. A rapid-fire courtship is followed by plans for a quick marriage.

On his wedding day, Jimmy is forced to cover an assignment in a jail without telling his betrothed of the circumstances. She gets worried and has an appeal broadcast for him. Dunn lies in a madcap jail where favored prisoners are allowed telephones, radios, cafe meals and occasional loves. The reporter manages to buy a "temporary parole" but it quickly brought back by two kidnapers, when the warden learns his true identity.

Mae Clarke, about to marry another man, discovers her fiance's predicament and goes to the jail to see him. While there she is locked in, through Dunn's contrivance. A reform committee arrives and a rib-rocking sequence winds up the film.
