COUNTY'S HEALTH PICTURE GIVEN AT FORUM LUNCHEON

The Jackson county health unit, since its organization, has more than earned its way in terms of lives saved, the residents of this county and illnesses prevented.

Deaths among infants under one year present a good index of the state of community health in Jackson county. Only one out of 26 infants born alive die during their first year. In 1921, one out of 17 such babies died in this county. In Oregon, on the whole, the same infant mortality existed as in Jackson county, and there is still room for improvement, as shown by the fact that Portland loses one in 30 babies during their first year, and Seattle but one in 28. El Paso, Texas, on the other hand, loses one in eight, and Memphis, Tenn., one in nine; while in Mexico six out of 10 babies born alive die during their first year, and in India, six out of 10.

Since 1921, the tuberculosis death rate in Jackson county has been reduced from 45 per 10,000 population, to 13. This is one of the lowest tuberculosis death rates in the whole country.

Diphtheria, now known to be both curable and preventable, took 17 lives in Jackson county from 1920 to 1931. There have been no deaths from this cause in this county in the past four years, an excellent tribute to the effectiveness of the diphtheria reduction program by the health unit and the physicians of this county.

Small pox, an entirely needless disease providing vaccination is widely practiced, has taken no lives in this county since 1921.

Maternal deaths, that is, deaths due to accidents and diseases of childbirth, are needlessly high in this section. Not only have they failed to decrease, but are showing some signs of increase. Deaths from this cause in Jackson county are one-quarter higher than for the U. S. registration area as a whole, and one-third higher than in the state of Oregon as a whole. The benefits of early medical attention should be made available to every expectant mother as early in her period of pregnancy as possible. Other communities have demonstrated that this simple procedure will reduce maternal deaths from one-quarter to one-half. With excellent results thus far obtained by the Jackson county health unit it would appear false economy to deny reasonable financial support to this organization. One dollar per capita per year is the very minimum upon which an efficient health department can function. Several cities spend two dollars per capita per year and consider it a good investment.

Good community health is purchasable within reasonable limits. Any expenditure for health department purposes up to two dollars per capita per year will bring any community many times that amount in terms of prevention of needless illnesses and death.

Realizing that the markets of the world are flooded with culls of every type, the agricultural committee stresses only the raising of quality products.

liefing that agricultural problems of many years' standing can be solved overnight, in a few months, or even in one year. Most of the problems confronting us require concerted effort over a period of years; in order to accomplish the desired results. Our chief problems, we believe, are not of production, but of marketing. Practically every city and community recognizes the need and value of a sane agricultural development program as a regular part of its chamber of commerce activities. Because others are doing it is not the reason we have made agricultural development our major activity, but our action is based on the logical conclusion that this is primarily an agricultural section.

The Chamber of Commerce, it was pointed out, does everything possible to urge the support of local producers, and many examples of groups organized by the chamber would show
