

YUKON EXPEDITION FIRST TO EXPLORE GRIM SNOW REGION

Mighty St. Elias Mountains Crossed On Alaska-Yukon Border to Survey Area Previously Unmapped

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Sp.)—In the face of blinding blizzards, destruction by fire of equipment, and near tragedy to some of its dogs, the National Geographic Society's Yukon Expedition made the first crossing of the mighty St. Elias mountain range on the Yukon-Alaska border and thus withdrew a vast region from the unmapped areas of the world.

The expedition, led by the youthful explorer Bradford Washburn, of Cambridge, Massachusetts, crossed the range on foot with dog sledges for the first time in history despite terrific hardships. The expedition also made maps and aerial photographs of a large area of the St. Elias range previously unmapped, near the Yukon-Alaska border.

Peaks Named for King, Queen
The area the Washburn party explored is at the junction of the southeastern corner of Alaska and the southwestern corner of Yukon Territory, Canada, famous in the Klondike gold rush days of 38 years ago.

Several immense new mountain peaks were discovered by the expedition and their positions located with surveying instruments and cameras which were carried to a height of more than 12,000 feet on Mt. Hubbard, the highest survey station ever occupied in Canada.

Two of the new peaks in Canadian territory were named for King George and Queen Mary in honor of their silver jubilee. Mr. Washburn received the following telegram from Sir John Simon, British Secretary of State for foreign affairs:

"The King commands me to express to you the sincere appreciation of the compliment which the National Geographic Society-Yukon Expedition has paid to his Majesty and to the Queen in naming the newly discovered peaks after their majesties in commemoration of his Silver Jubilee. The King congratulates the expedition on their important achievement in effecting the first crossing of the St. Elias range from Yukon to Alaska."

Fought Severe Blizzards
The expedition camped 84 days on snow and ice fields and conducted surveys in the face of extreme cold, bad snow conditions and severe blizzards. A huge glacier, 40 miles long, one of the largest in North America, was named after ex-President Abbott Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University.

The explorers suffered two near-disasters. Three of the best dogs of their highly-essential dog team fell into a crevice in a glacier 70 feet deep but were rescued unharmed by two of the men who were lowered into the crevice by ropes. A fire starting from a small stove burned one tent and a sleeping bag, leaving one tent and three sleeping bags for four men in the expedition's advanced survey party.

After reaching the Alaskan sea coast Washburn and one other man travelled the last lap to civilization in a rubber boat like that taken by Amelia Earhart on her flight from Hawaii to the United States. This boat was carried by the expedition all the way across the mountains.

Members of the expedition in addition to Washburn were: Robert H. Bates, Philadelphia, Pa.; Hartness Beardsley, Springfield, Vt.; Adams Dalber, West Newton, Mass.; Ome Taylor, Seattle, Wash.; Andrew M. Taylor, Ottawa, Canada. Robert Ran-

RIOTING BREAKS OUT WHEN GUARDS LEAVE

JOPLIN, Mo., June 28.—(AP)—Rioting broke out today between miners and workers in the Tri-State lead and zinc field 24 hours after National Guardsmen were withdrawn.

The sheriff's office said the miners, reportedly armed with guns, clubs and rocks, attacked men going to work at the Galena, Kan., smelter of the Eagle Pitcher Lead company, which was to reopen today.

C. OF C. AVIATION COMMITTEE HAS IMPORTANT WORK

at the time when the air mail was cancelled considerable pressure was brought through the efforts of this committee in order to have it re-established. Members of this committee also interviewed the two army officials from the war department recently and as a result, an army radio station has been announced for Medford.

With a United States army servicing station and a staff of three men from the air corps, the department of commerce always radio, United States weather bureau, and other organizations represented at the airport, this committee has many contacts to keep in order to protect what we have at present, and to promote those things which it is believed will be needed in the future if the Medford airport is to maintain its present high standing. The aviation committee keeps in touch with all developments both commercial and governmental so that no opportunity will be lost to extend Medford's claims to those new developments as they take place. In order to keep Medford's airport continually before the public this committee at all times entertains groups of aviators when they arrive in the city.

Last year Brigadier Gen. Westover of the air corps and approximately 60 officers came to Medford and were entertained by this committee with the result that Medford's importance from an air defense standpoint was placed before General Westover and his staff. Other groups have been interviewed similarly.

ADOPTED BABY GIRL AT M'NARY'S HOME TWO WEEKS SECRET

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(AP)—Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary of Oregon have a new daughter, Charlotte by name.

The five-weeks old baby came from Philadelphia about two weeks ago, but the event was kept secret until yesterday.

The Republican leader of the senate and Mrs. McNary have been childless during their 12 years of marriage, but when a close friend of Mrs. McNary died in Philadelphia after giving birth to the baby, the senator's wife went immediately to that city, fell in love with the little lady and with the father's and the senator's consent, brought the child back to Washington with her.

The senator admitted that although Charlotte—the nearest the senator's wife could get to Charles in a girl's name—had been with them only two weeks he had not escaped some of the burdens of parenthood. The first night Charlotte occupied the McNary apartment there was no nurse with her. She cried and the senator had to spend a considerable portion of the night walking the floor and testing the effectiveness of various soothing devices. Charlotte now has a nurse.
