on among the attorneys, was not disclosed, and in the case of identification of the baby, was stipulated in court against Hauptmann's wishes.

That through "negligence of the lawyers" facts were suppressed which had a direct bearing on the guilt or innocence of Hauptmann.

Sitting in a tiny apartment, Mrs. Gloeckner, small, middle-aged, with blue eyes and corn-yellow hair, explained her reasons for her activity in the case.

"Richard is innocent of this terrible crime. I do not say this only because he is my brother. That is very foolish. I have a child of my own, and my personal feelings are most sympathetic to the Lindbergh family.

"Do people think if I thought Richard did that terrible thing I would defend him? I am not such a woman. I do not feel the conviction of my brother has solved the kidnapping. I am certain the real kidnaper will be discovered—and it would be a terrible thing if my brother were to go to his death, only to have people know later an innocent man was punished."

Mrs. Gloeckner said, "After my brother's trial, I went to New Jersey and we talked about certain things which did not come out in the trial. I asked, 'Why didn't these things come out?'"

She said she had been advised by C. Lloyd Fisher, Hauptmann's attorney, that "all the defense lawyers agreed the child found was not the Lindbergh baby, but when this came up in court, Mr. Kelly (Edward J. Kelly, then chief defense counsel) stood up and said the defense would stipulate it was the Lindbergh baby."

"The other lawyers walked out of court. Why didn't they tell the judge that was not the child of my brother or the other lawyers?"

"When these lawyers came before the New Jersey supreme court, they were asked why they did not raise objections to these things, and the answer was: 'Mr. Kelly was chief counsel.' What do they mean by that? Were they not there to protect my brother's interests?"

"Why wasn't Mr. Curtis (John N. Curtis, convicted of obstructing justice in the Lindbergh case) who said he contacted the kidnaper, brought into court to say whether it was my brother? The jury should have heard what Mr. Curtis had to say."

"The 500 fingerprints they said were on the ladder—other people who were investigated but never brought into court—other warning notes that were not produced—all this should have been made known."

Until these things are known, people of this country cannot feel they have punished the kidnaper. We want the kidnaper punished—and the death of my brother will never bring that result. It will merely be an attempt to close up a crime that has not been solved."

BUTTER MARKET AIDED BY GROWTH IN CONSUMPTION

PORTLAND, July 9.—(AP)—Increased consumption of butter has brought a better demand and the market is getting well settled. It is believed the government will soon begin buying some butter in the east for further stabilization of prices. Trading has been active, and buyers are filling shipping orders in wide volume.

The Oregon butter committee sent out notice today of an amendment to the state butter code, to be effective July 10, showing the minimum butterfat price schedule of the Oregon butter code (schedule A) has been changed for the purpose of remedying certain inequalities and adjusting discrepancies which exist in the present schedule. It provides for a manufacturing margin which is never less than four cents.

Prices were based on the extra cube quotation from the Portland produce exchange, differing only slightly from the old schedule.

A firm market tone was prevailing in the egg business, and jobbing quotations were steady at the one cent advance on large and medium extras. Local receipts during last week totaled 6074 cases, which exceeded those of the week before by 80 cases.

Retail outlets in dressed poultry were in need of supplies to replace stocks depleted last week-end, but jobbing supplies were fully adequate to fill the demand, and prices remained unchanged.

BREWSTER RILED BY TESTIMONY OF R.F.C. ATTORNEY

Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.), in charge of the bill in the senate, as he arose to reply to an attack made upon his own views by Senator Dieterich (D., Ill.), a foe of abolition.

Views Personal Kennedy emphasized that his views were entirely "personal."

The letter, sent in reply to a request from Wheeler for his views, declared the bill as it passed the senate with a definite provision for eliminating all but one holding company for each geographically integrated system could be administered with "reasonable efficiency."

"But the burden cast upon us by the house bill," the chairman added, "is simply staggering."

SPORT SLANTS by Paul

Big league baseball stars who entertain notions of reaping a golden harvest barnstorming after the curtain has been rung down on the regular season had better get the ideas out of their heads, for the owners are not likely to be as generous in granting permission to do so as they have been in the past.

Too many of the lads who engaged in post-season baseball have failed to show anything approaching their best form and much of the blame is due to the fact that they have been "over baseballled."

Perhaps it is slightly inaccurate to say that the long slump which Lou Gehrig and Lefty Gomez of the New York Yankees have suffered was entirely due to their taking part in the world tour but the fact remains that, of the group who invaded the Far East for the baseball series late last fall, only Jimmy Foxx, the Athletics' slugger, has not felt the blight of lost form.

Babe Ruth, the outstanding player of the Japanese series, quit the Boston Braves in disgust when he failed to show enough to warrant his continuing as a regular player. Certainly, playing ball abroad did not help his already shaggy legs nor tend to increase his chances of making the grade in the National league.

Beans Not Up to '34 Form The disappointing showing of the Cardinals in the National league pennant race can be traced to the poor showing of the Dean boys, Dizay and Darty passed up few if any opportunities to make an honest dollar last fall and winter. They didn't limit their activities to baseball but invaded every possible field where their baseball reputation would net them a return.

Their records for the present season would stamp them as rather ordinary hurlers, nothing like the pair who stood the National league on its head and pitched the Cardinals to a sensational victory in the world series against the Detroit Tigers.

Dizay has stood up better than his younger brother, at that. Paul's record showed, nearing the end of June, 7 defeats against 7 victories. He has shown little of the ability that led many experts to predict that he would in the future surpass anything Dizay could do. In his hour of failure he has tried to blame everyone on the field, most of all the umpires. In a recent start against the Brooklyn Dodgers he could not survive the first inning.

Perhaps it is being just a little hard on the Dean boys to make them shoulder the entire blame for the position of the Cardinals occupy in the pennant chase. Other causes can be found, with a little investigating.

No Substitute For Tex For one thing the Cardinals have not replaced Tex Carleton, whom they traded to the Cubs last winter. Carleton turned in 18 victories last season and that number of wins would help a lot.

The former Cardinal hurler has done nothing sensational for the Chicago team, his record to date showing 3 victories against 3 defeats, but he has continued to hold his pins over the Boston Braves. His recent victory was the eighth in nine starts against them.
