WIFE OF KIDNAPER NOT SEEN BY BOY DURING CAPTIVITY

He sat down in the big chair on the dais between the jury and Judge Cushman and looked at Dennis.
Prisoner Grins
Mrs. Waley, her face still flushed, grinned at the three presiding tables and then turned to watch the youngster. She started his testimony, but nonplussed at the unfamiliar surroundings and puzzled even at the informal language in which Dennis phrased his questions.
George's father, J. P. Weyerhaeuser, Jr., leaned forward in his chair at the side of the room and watched his $2000 son closely.
But as George rapidly became more accustomed to the procedure, Weyerhaeuser's anxious expression softened and he leaned back again.
Some of George's answers were so low they could not be heard across the courtroom.
He gave his name, his parents' names and his address and school.
Referring to Friday, May 24, Dennis brought out that he started home for lunch and reached a tennis court.
Then, when he reached the tennis court, what happened, George? Dennis asked.
There was a long pause.
"Did you meet a man there at that time, George?" Dennis prodded.
"No," the boy said.
Identifies Pictures
Dennis smiled, said "Well..." and picked up a picture.
George glanced at it and said quickly that it was "Mahan."
He said: "That's 'Mahan,' when shown a photograph of Waley. Waley, who pleaded guilty to the snatch and was sentenced to 45 years June 21, was even then waiting in the marshal's office to be Mrs. Waley's only corroborative witness when the prosecution rests today.
George said he did not know if Waley was in the audience when Mahan nabbed him at the tennis court.
He identified a picture of a shack but explained he was not taken to it from the tennis court.
"Where did you go, George, after leaving the tennis court? Do you know?" Dennis asked.
"Yes, to a hole," said George.
"Where did you meet him, George?" asked Dennis.
"At the tennis court."
Dennis asked what Mahan did.
"Put me in a car," George said.
"What did the auto do then?"
"It went," George laughed, throwing back his head. The crowd laughed, too, and balliffs rapped for order.
Chained in Hole
George identified photographs of the hole to which he was taken and its surroundings.
"Where did they do with you there?" Dennis asked. "I see some chains there (examining the photograph himself). What did they do with you?"
"Fastened me," said the boy.
George was keeping his gaze riveted on Dennis.
"George," asked Dennis, "did you sign your name to a letter that night?"
"No," the boy said. "I did that before I came to the hole."

It was believed this referred to the first "Rapist Exposed" ransom letter delivered to his parents by special delivery that evening.
He identified a picture of a rock he said seen "just before we came to the second hole," and after several questions, Dennis brought out that he was taken to the second hole the second night.
He identified the photograph of a log at the second hole, and Dennis asked:
Waley On Guard.
"Who stayed with you at the second hole, Harmon or Mahan?"
"Harmon," said George.
Dennis showed him two lanterns, one with a red globe, and one with unlit globe.
George said the red one was in both pits.
He said he was taken from the second pit "the next night" and driven in an automobile to the next place "up on a hill."
He said the automobile stopped at the foot and that Waley went up with him.
"Did you see any water or anything?" asked the U. S. attorney.
"Yes," said George, "either a bay or a lake."

Richard Arlen in Craterian Thriller

From the bite in an apple they learned who their man was from a leather glove they learned his hideout; and from the broken heel of a woman's shoe, they learned the name of his moll! Impossible? Perhaps. But after one sees the federal agents reconstructing a crime from such bare clues in "Let 'Em Have It," starting today at the Craterian theater, one begins to believe the possibility of such amazing truths.
"Let 'Em Have It," which has Richard Arlen, Virginia Bruce, Alice Brady, Bruce Cabot, Harvey Stephens and many other screen favorites in the featured roles, is the newest of the G-Men pictures, this time, however, adding a little of the technical side - an "inside peek" as it were - to the many thrilling episodes with which the picture abounds.
Arlen, Stephens and Gordon Jones are the G-Men on the trail of Bruce Cabot, Public Enemy No. 1, and the film takes a sharp rap at the present day parole board methods, showing Cabot, after his parole, becoming the country's worst killer and gangster extraordinary until the federal men finally meet him at his own game and "rub him out."

Rialto Friday

A new kind of Western picture comes to the Rialto theater for tomorrow and Saturday, Buck Jones in "Stone of Silver Creek." It tells an exciting story of events in a frontier town, with a sharply drawn picture of the struggle between good and evil. Never before has an outdoor drama combined so many features which furnish real entertainment to a theater audience, including as it does a story of exceptional power, acting of the highest quality, fitting songs, and the breath-taking scenery of the great west.

On Roxy Bill

Barbara Stanwyck is starred at the Roxy theater today and Friday in "The Woman in Red" with Gene Raymond and Genevieve Tobin heading the supporting cast.
