

ROGUE BAT SPREE DEFEATS ASHLAND LITHIANS 14 TO 5

The Medford Rogues did it yesterday. They walloped the Ashland Lithians at the fairgrounds here 14-5 by playing errorless ball and collecting 21 hits off "Chief" McLean of Ashland.

To add salt to the Ashland wounds, the victory was credited to Bauman, Medford twirler who signed with Ashland under John Miljus earlier in the season, and was given his release by Miljus when that gentleman resigned as manager a few weeks ago. Medford snapped him up, and his eligibility to play with the locals has been a bone of contention with Ashland since.

"Hoosier" Hoffard, player-manager who is leading the league in hitting, got two hits out of four trips to the platter, a record surpassed by the performance of Courtney, who collected four blows from six trips.

Les Wolfe, handsome wrestler who pitched baseball for some time in Texas, hurled the last inning for Medford. Two men popped out, and the third one fouled out to retire the side, giving Wolfe an impressive rating on paper.

The victory eliminated the Ashland nine from any chance at the league pennant, the locals having been ousted from any show long ago.

The Rogues meet the Detroit Colored Clowns at the fairgrounds next Sunday.

Fast Grappling His Game

EVANS CCC NINE TO PLAY ROGUES

The Evans Creek CCC camp baseball nine, untrammelled in 23 games so far this year, has issued a challenge to the Medford Rogues. The Rogues took the challenge, and a game has been arranged for tomorrow night at the Senior high school field on South Oakdale avenue.

The Evans creek team, formerly called the Cayes City Cavemen, has walloped the Grants Pass and the Klamath Falls Southern Oregon league teams, and would like to make it a clean slate by accommodating Medford and Ashland in the same way.

Les Wolfe, rangy Texas wrestler who pitched the last inning of the Medford-Ashland game yesterday, will twirl for the Rogues, according to Manager Hoffard. The game is called for 8:30.

SPORT SLANTS by Pam

In sharp contrast to the occasion last winter when we saw Max Baer, then heavyweight boxing champion of the world, attack a little golf ball on the Miami-Biltmore course with all the power his 235-pound frame could muster to practically no avail, we watched a group of high school boys start on their merry way in the qualifying round of the first annual Westchester county (N. Y.) high school golf tournament with long, straight tee shots that split the center of the fairways of Saxon Woods.

A pint-sized golfer from Harrison high school, Frank Batto, a shade over four feet tall and weighing considerably less than a hundred pounds, teed up and drove the ball 235 yards down the alley with all the ease and grace of a pro.

To prove that his first effort was no "fluke" Frank equaled that mark on several other holes and turned in an 82 to quality.

The tournament didn't attract more than a handful of a gallery but just about the entire gathering chose to follow Frank Batto for the little fellow fairly reeks of color. A snappy dresser, he looks like a tiny model of the famous Gene Sarazen. Like most of the youngsters in the tournament he learned the game as a caddy and has tried to pattern his game after Sarazen, whom he idolizes. Sarazen, you know, learned the game in the spare moments when he was not toting a bag full of clubs for golfers on courses not so many miles from Saxon Woods.

Don't be at all surprised if one of these future days you see a black-haired mite named Frank Batto pop up and do something big in the way of golf. Paste that name in your hat—Frank Batto.

It's All in The Swing

Small, slim Johnny Parker, former captain of the Yale golf team and recent winner of the Metropolitan amateur golf championship, is another golfer who makes up for his lack of physical ruggedness by the smooth flowing grace of his swing and just plain sound golfing form.

Parker doesn't shoot for great distance but can be depended on to keep his drives straight. Accuracy with the iron and phenomenal putting were big factors in his successful bid for golf glory. His swing is a slow, compact and precise sweep which he has under complete control at every stage.

Parker took the Metropolitan title by defeating Gene Homans 5 and 4. In the 36-hole final at the Caneo Brook Country club, Summit, N. J.

Homans, it will be recalled is the last man Bobby Jones defeated in a national championship before he retired. It was at Merton in 1930 when Homans met Jones in the final round of the national amateur championship that Gene stood between the Emperor and the goal of his ambitions—the Grand Slam.

An exhausting 36-hole match against Charlie Seaver on the day previous left Homans easy prey for Jones. Homans insists that he will never forget that final at Merton for it was more like a circus than a golf match on which the amateur title hinged. The crowd was unmanageable and that made the waiting at the tees seem endless. Jones couldn't have been any happier than Homans was when the last putt was down.

OLDS TAX CASE NEAR END IN CIRCUIT COURT

The suit in equity of the Owen-Owen Lumber company against Mildard D. Olds, for the collection of $7400, allegedly due for Jackson county taxes, will be completed in circuit court late today. Olds contends the amount was paid; the lumber company, otherwise, each holds the other is obligated to make the payment under the terms of a contract.

Much of the evidence in the case is documentary and highly involved.

Rich Diet Kills Dog Actor. PITTSBURGH—(UP)—Skippy, a fox terrier, lived not wisely but too well. The pet scaled histrionic heights in a high school stage production after amateur dramatists cajoled him into his part with sweets and meats. The "high living" brought death in three weeks.

HOLD TALENT MAN ON STOCK THEFT

Fred Roseborough of the Talent district, charged with theft of livestock, was bound over to the grand jury by Justice of the Peace William R. Coleman, following a hearing.

Roseborough was charged with slaughtering a Hereford calf, valued at $25 and belonging to Kay Lookey, stockman. He admitted canning some of the meat and selling the balance to a Talent meat market, according to officers.

Lester Dunagan, a truck driver, charged with speeding his truck from Trail to this city, on the Grater Lake highway, was fined $3 and costs, which he promised to pay last Saturday. He failed to remit per promise.
