ECLIPSE OF MOON VISIBLE TONIGHT

By HOWARD W. LAKELEE (Associated Press Science Editor) NEW YORK, (AP)—The western hemisphere sees a total eclipse of the moon on the night of July 15-16. For the United States the eclipse begins at 9:14 p. m., eastern standard time, and ends at 2:43 a. m.

The real total eclipse lasts from 11:00 until 12:49 a. m.—an hour and 49 minutes.

During this time it may be possible to see the moon faintly where the sky is very clear. The faint illumination then will come from rays of the sun which are bent—that is, refracted—toward as they pass through the earth's atmosphere in the sunrise and sunset belts that border the night.

It will be sunset over Russia and sunrise over Hawaii during the total eclipse. If those parts of the world happen to be cloudy, the refracted rays will be completely obscured during mid-totality, when it is in the center of the earth's shadow.

This shadow is double. It is an inner well of total lack of sunlight, the umbra, surrounded by the penumbra, a concentric ring of partial earth shadow.

The umbra is almost exactly three times the diameter of the moon. The penumbra is an outer shadow ring about the moon's diameter.

The moon will touch the penumbra first at 9:14 p. m. and be completely in it at 10:12. At that time it should be a bronze disc. Again at 1:46 a. m. it will be completely in the penumbra, after passing out of the total shadow.

In this eclipse the moon passes very nearly through the center of the umbra. Its course is slightly north of the dead center of blackness.

'Mechanics' Of A Phenomenon

This diagram shows what will happen during the total eclipse of the moon on the night of July 15-16. Because of light rays bent by the atmosphere at the earth's edge, the moon will be slightly visible even in total shadow unless clouds interfere with its refracted light.
