

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 19.—Thoughts while strolling: Dudley Field Malone suggests the rubicund, portly fellow on the Worcester-shire saucer bottle I had a sort of Walt Disney idea of Noah until a recent study of Genesis. Never talked to anyone who understood business so well as Thomas Watson.

Look alike: T. Markoe Robertson, society fellow, and Osgood Perkins. The eternal juvenile—Oscar Shaw. No one has equaled Roxy's flair for the spectacular in movie shows. Or Gil Boggs' 1932 night club polish. Grandest of the current mimics: Norma Terris. What became of Ray Coetz?

Add frequent dinner companions: Joe P. Kennedy and Herbert Bayard Swope. At 60, Irving Caesar should be a ringer for Joe Weber. The boardwalk has lost the dog owner trade for Atlantic City. What long eyelashes Jim Flagg has. Nobody wears royal blue so becomingly as Margaret Whitman.

Overcoat Bill wearing his six overcoats the year around and picking up pins. Bud Kelland, who never wrote a suggestive line in his life, is the reputed ace in popularity in the fiction field. Celebrates a cinch to caricature: Alexander Woolcott, Edna Ferber, Harold Ross and Bob Eberwood, the playwright.

Made up smiles: "His confidence in women was as pathetic as a sailor home from a three years' cruise." Bob Garland and Will Hays could swap ears and no one would notice. Lesser enthusiasms No. 2—Bob LaFollette. A lady inquires: "What do you mean arabesque?" You'll die at this one: Esque me another?

Wanted: A murder mystery where you give a dash whether he was killed or not. And understand just how he was killed and don't want to kick the detective. And don't believe the love interest was just lugged in and with a plan somewhere near the fatal scene. And with intelligent police. And a jacket without a herald, bloody corpse. And one that isn't the author's Best Yet!

In a tiny shop on 42d street today the single window was decorated with fly paper. It attracted no attention and I was the lone pauser for a quiet chuckle. No matter how many, many myriads of gag men have used it in no matter how many comical, fly humor. Whenever I'm in a funk, I think of a sheet of fly paper and all sorts of pleasant imaginings romp along to cheer me. Sometimes in a mad mood I force a few of our loud-mouthed Messiahs to devour four sheets each.

Out of the William Lyon Phelps story bag: A female admirer of Einstein, strolling with him in the evening, said: "Isn't Venus beautiful up there in the sky tonight?" He said: "It isn't Venus, it's Jupiter." She replied: "O, Prof. Einstein, aren't you wonderful, you even know the sex of stars!"

And, alas, how many adventurous glances from admiring males, the eyes of a pure and beautiful maid have to dodge along the streets. I noticed one yesterday in the new lampshade hat trip down the steps of the Plaza for a turn into the avenue. She had, like so many of her sisters, cultivated the art of apparently seeing nobody. Yet I felt certain there was not one glance she missed. Not even mine.

I have a friend who is an European correspondent. In his most confidential letters he underlines his u's and overlines his n's. As though to be ready for the printer of his Life and Letters!

Louis Bromfield in a literary magazine manifesto trumpets the hand-picked dinner parties of Edna Ferber. To his notion they are the peak in charm, hospitality and excellent food. They are prepared by a colored cook, Rebecca Henry. At Miss Ferber's the guests are as good as the food and a high light of such an adventure in dining is the presence of Mrs. Julia Ferber, the writer's mother. The two are inseparable. Among distinguished that may be found at her festal board now and then are Noel Coward, J. P. Morgan, Marc Connelly, the George S. Kaufmans, Harold Ross, Alexander Woolcott, Margaret Pulitzer and Dorothy Parker.

I wonder how many others feared their grandfathers. Ours of mine was kindly but gruff. Once he thought he mislaid his glasses. He had me looking for them and I ran about like a headless thing. Finally he took me to task for not observing what he discovered; that he was wearing them all the time, pushed up. The fact was I was always too scared to look him in the face.
