Communications

Economies and Hot Springs
To the Editor:
Everyone remembers how Senator Johnson of California used to make use of the sentence in his speeches the fall of 1932 when he was stumping the country for Roosevelt for President—"It Might Have Been Worse."

Well, his words have surely come true. Who can say that it is not worse and getting worse every day.

While the government is appropriating billions of dollars—and spending it with a lavish hand where they believe it will do the most good for the remainder of the country doing? The republicans in their grass root grape vine conventions that they are holding over the country, make lots of flowery speeches, have just about as much to offer for reviving business as their half-brothers in Washington.

In place of making use of the opportunities that they have at hand—they are just bull-headed enough to try every thing else first.

Well, the people in 1936 will not have any trouble in deciding what course to pursue, as everything else has been tried out, but the right thing, and they will show by an overwhelming majority that they are going to take a hand and do what is the right thing that should have been done, long ago.

Any business man in Medford knows well enough, that if they did business on the same scale that our government is run that they would not do business very long. And it is mystery of the 20th century why they are not trying to do something to help get this world out of this tangle that we are wrapped up in.

Just to give you an illustration of what I mean, by not making use of the opportunities that are right at their door, but which they will turn down to advertise something else, especially if it is down in California. A prominent lady here in Medford who was not feeling well, called on one of the doctors for advice as to where she could go to a health resort that might benefit her. The doctor told her to go to Richardson Springs in California.

She said, "no I cannot do that. What about Jackson Hot Springs?" The doctor said, "I never thought of them."

Do you see the point? They are not in California. The lady is taking the baths at Jackson Hot Springs and says that she is feeling fine.

If those springs were back in the mountains 30 or 40 miles, where you had to go with a pack horse—the trail would be crowded all of the time, but it being right here so handy it has no advertising value.

Wake up and see what there is right in your door yard—and not some other state.

Ye Poet's Corner

Martyr Mother.
Your sweet face
Holds its youthful charm
And smiles for all the world to see.

The scar of loss
Is not an emblem on your sleeve
Where heartless ones stare curiously
When all the world
Spent anguish in a loud lament,
Your tears flowed quietly.

Only an eagle's mate
Could attain your splendid height
And face the world so bravely.

REED WILL FACE BURGLARY TRIAL IF GIVEN PARDON

M. Martin. The plea was denied, but the governor gave Reed hope for clemency in the future. Reed, through his attorney, Gus Newbury of this city, presented evidence in an effort to show that he was a quarter of a mile away from the scene of the shooting, in a hamburger stand, at the time of its occurrence. The governor, in his review of the case, expressed doubt that Reed had fired the fatal shot.

Sheriff Sublett, in his notification, states that in the event Reed is ever liberated, he will seek re-education papers and serve them as Reed leaves the prison gates.

The hold warrant charges Reed, McQuade and Jackson, with the burglary of the Medford company store at Redding, Calif., two nights before the Knott murder. Goods, reputedly stolen from the store, were found in the auto, belonging to Reed and abandoned by him near Gold Hill in his flight after the crime.
