Roar of Cannon May Interrupt Ethiopia's New Year's Activities

By CHARLES NORMAN. (Associated Press Staff Writer) If Museolini's African legions wer to invade Ethiopia in September as some military observers predict they would strike at a country celebrating its New Year. Ethiopia's New Year's day falls on eptember 11. "The Abyssinian army," writes a British historian, "is in effect practrially the people for with the ex-ception of prises and munkat every man is a potential soldier-love of fighting is in his blood." It Rains Torrents.

September looms as the likely time for invasion because of the peculiar for invasion because of the peculiar weather conditions that govern the whole of Ethiopia. The country has two seasons, in the main-Bags, which is the dry season, from Sep-tember to mid-June; and Karamih, om her trust. Dated and first published July 8th. MATTIE E PIOKEL, Executive of the Ease of E B. Pickel, 'deceased' a half menths, from mid-June to the end of September

"When it rains it pours" is an understatement when applied to Ethiopia. The rais comes down in torrents and turns primitize roads into raging streams and rivers. War-time maneuvers are impossible under such condition

Ethiopla's Boundaries

Ethiopia's Boundaries. Modern Abyssinia is believed to be composed of three races—the Hamites of north and mortheast Africa; a Semitic strain because of invasions from Arabia; and a Ni-gritic element introduced by inter-marriage with conquered negro tribes For centuries they have beaten back burgeton afree invasion and in nvasion after invasion, and in odern times have inflicted severe fefeats on Egypt and Italy. Emperor Monelik, whose army rushed the Italians in 1808, made boundary treaties with England.
