

NIPPON STUDENTS ENJOY LAKE TRIP AS CLUB GUESTS

Touring Youngsters Off This Morning for San Francisco Following Crater Caravan On Monday

The Japanese-America student tour, conducted as a friendship gesture climaxed the second annual international student conference, left Medford at 10 o'clock this morning for San Francisco, bringing to a close a full day's stop in southern Oregon featured by a Rotary-Kiwanis banquet at noon in the Hotel Medford, and an afternoon trip by auto caravan to Crater Lake.

One member of the Japanese delegation, Tadashi Hasegawa of Doak-sha university, was rushed to the Sacred Heart hospital yesterday afternoon when he became ill with the flu during the visit to the national park. His attending physicians reported that he will probably be able to continue south in a few days by train, accompanied by the two companions who remained in Medford with him. They are Kiyoshi Goto and Sadatoshi Yamazumi.

The caravan to Crater Lake, perfectly conducted and made in bright, warm weather, proved one of the most interesting parts of the Japanese students' visit thus far, according to invariable exclamations of delight from the students themselves. As the 25-car procession moved along the beautiful Crater Lake highway, there were many expressions of excitement from the Japanese at the frequent sound of the sirens in the state police convoy. Those in charge of the Japanese delegation explained that the students were overwhelmed because of the fact that in Japan the sound of the siren is accorded only to royalty.

The Japanese seemed hardly able to express their admiration for the beauty of the lake, and many indicated that it was the most wonderful sight they had seen. The tour was divided into groups for trips to the water's edge, and through a novel 200-foot snow and ice tunnel to Watchman peak. The entire delegation was also taken to Summit Memorial to hear the explanation of the park naturalists, who described the origin of the lake with interesting Japanese comparisons.

Canfield Conducts
Superintendent David H. Canfield, who met and personally conducted the tour through the park, Medford and Berkeley, was the most interesting sight they had seen. The tour was divided into groups for trips to the water's edge, and through a novel 200-foot snow and ice tunnel to Watchman peak. The entire delegation was also taken to Summit Memorial to hear the explanation of the park naturalists, who described the origin of the lake with interesting Japanese comparisons.

Baron's Son Present
Among outstanding students in the foreign group are Yasumasa Togo, whose father, Baron Togo, was president of the first Rotary club of Tokyo, and Masashi Kato, son of Admiral Kato, who represented Japan at the Washington naval conference. Masashi is leader of the delegation.

Several humorous incidents of the tour were recounted jovially during the Medford visit, one of which was when a Japanese student, evidently wishing to learn how to drive, jumped into an auto and ran over the lawn at Reed college, leaving the car wreacked on so that the machine caught fire. In Seattle, another of the party innocently tipped a street car conductor with a sales tax token.

SENATE IN FAVOR LIMITING PAY OF AIR MAIL CHIEFS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(AP)—The senate today agreed to the conference report on the McKellar-Mead bill limiting the compensation of officials of air mail contracting lines and making other changes in the air mail laws.

The house has yet to approve the report, presiding committee adjusting house and senate differences on the measure.

Among other things, the bill would permit present transcontinental air lines to retain their coastal routes.

Existing air mail rates would be maintained under it, but the interstate commerce commission would be authorized to study eight contracts under which the present 33 1/3 cents per mile limit is paid. The commission would be required to report to congress by January 15 whether a higher limit is warranted.

The conference report was approved without a recorded vote. Approval was opposed, however, by Senators Austin (R., Va.) and Johnson (R., Calif.).

ROGERS AND POST NEARING TAKEOFF ON ALASKA JAUNT

long flight, equipment presumably needed for an extended journey in the far north was not stowed aboard and mechanics at the field said minor adjustments still must be made to pontoons and the motor.

Rogers, who arrived here late yesterday by plane from San Francisco, said he intended to accompany the Posts to Alaska, probably as far as Juneau, but that he had no intention of continuing from Nome across Bering Strait to Siberia.

Post, tactician as usual, or even more so, left whatever talking was done to Rogers. The humorist film actor in turn explained he trusted Post as a flier and that all details of the flight were being arranged by Post.

When Rogers first arrived he paraded all questions about flying with the Posts, but finally disclosed that he was going on "the pleasure jaunt."

"I've never been to Alaska," Rogers said, "and as Wiley's a mighty good flier, it's a good chance. I want to have a look at the Matanuska colony while I'm north. I want to see what the Democrats have done to the Republicans."

Cancelled stamps and even the postmarks were being disposed of at prices that were expected to net a considerable sum during the year, Snell reported.

The secretary's office said today that a new record was set during June, when 75,608 pieces of first class mail was received at the office. The record high for one day was reached July 1, when 19,517 letters were received.

Trousered Skirts Loom On Winter Fashion Sky

By ADELAIDE KERR (Associated Press Foreign Staff)

PARIS, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Trousered skirts for sports, afternoon and evening wear and hosed dresses, suits and coats were exhibited today at Bruyere's winter fashion show.

Buyers predicted that trousered skirts were "going to be in evidence" this winter. They appeared in brown and grey wool for sports, the frocks having basque bodices and very wide, divided skirts.

Afternoon dresses were in black satin and velvet with 10-inch wide trousers showing a few inches under slender skirts which were slit to the waistline in front. They were also seen in velvet dinner frocks, some of which were designed with a knee-length tunic over fairly full trousers gathered at the ankle.

Hoods were widely used for day clothes. Brown wool ensembles with capes, tweed coat dresses and straight, hem-length, black wool coats were all designed with loose-fitting hoods, while black-belted suits appeared with close-fitting broadtail hoods ending in the short-buffed cape.

Evening clothes displayed by other designers were of two types: Rich red, blue and black velvets and pastel-toned lame moires designed on slender lines with the skirts falling into soft trains and decolette very low in the back with high front; changeable taffetas fashioned with full skirts and soft puffed sleeves recalled the gowns of the Italian renaissance.

STATE H. E. LAUDED BY MRS. BIRDSEYE

CORVALLIS, Ore., Aug. 6.—(AP)—Mrs. Miriam Birdseye of Gold Hill, here today for the annual session of the Home Economics Extension Council of Oregon, of which she is president, declared women in this state are exceptionally fortunate because the "Home Rule" policy prevails in the formulation of the extension service's program.

Cut-and-dried methods are utilized with no regard for individual wishes in some states, she said.

Mrs. Claribel Nye, retiring leader of the group, told delegates that greater results in home betterment work could be achieved by continuing the close tie-up between county committee women, project leaders, home economics graduates and home demonstration agents.
