

ORGANIZATION TO HELP INVENTORS AVOID SWINDLERS

Competent Advice And Guidance Offered—Schemes For Defrauding Patent Holders Are Given Light.

NEW YORK (UP)—Inventors in the United States are defrauded of millions of dollars by unscrupulous persons who make a regular business of preying on those who receive patent grants from the United States Patent Office.

Offers Advice In co-operation with New York University, Stevens Institute of Technology and the International Correspondence Schools, the Foundation seeks to provide competent advice and guidance in all matters relating to patents and inventions.

One of the most frequent proposals made by swindlers to inventors is to offer to sell the inventor's patent on a 25 per cent commission basis.

Another favorite scheme is for the swindler to tell the inventor that he has a buyer who will pay a large sum for the Canadian rights provided a patent is taken out in Canada.

Pay High for Rights The agreement to obtain the patent in Canada is carried out, but then the inventor is told that the buyer has changed his mind; the sale is off.

There are unscrupulous inventors as well as unscrupulous persons who prey upon inventors. Probably the most common type of fraud under this head is for the inventor to sell what seems to be a valuable patent to one manufacturer, and then proceed to sell to a competing manufacturer a patent for an improvement which makes the first patent practically worthless.

WILMINGTON, Cal. (UP)—He doesn't know where it comes from, but Cristobal Salcido is getting 13 barrels of oil daily from the family water pump in the back yard and selling it at $1.75 per barrel.

There are several theories as to the origin, the most notable being that the oil comes from a leak in one of the many nearby pipelines from the fields.

"I don't care where it comes from," said Salcido, "just so it keeps coming"—which it probably won't. Similar backyard oil wells near famous Signal Hill dried up when refineries plugged the leaks.

HERD OF REINDEER LIKE NEW RANGE

OTTAWA, Ont. (UP)—Canada's northernmost herd of reindeer which recently completed a five-year trek from Alaska across the rim of the Arctic to Kitzingauit, east of the Mackenzie river, are having little difficulty in settling down on their new feeding ground.

Wireless messages received here by the Canadian department of interior report that the herd of 207 reindeer survived the long trek in good condition, and that 600 fawns already had been born.

The new land occupied by the herd consists of 6000 square miles of moss-covered ground, extending inland from the Arctic coast along the east bank of the Mackenzie river.

The herd was brought there under the supervision of Andy Bahr, veteran Seattle reindeer expert, at the request and expense of the Canadian government. The government hopes the animals will provide a new source of food and clothing for Eskimos in the region for a long time to come.
