STATE MILK CODE TO HOLD IS WORD

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 8.—(AP) Should the state supreme court hold the state agricultural adjustment act unconstitutional it would in no way affect operation of the milk code, J. D. Mickle of the agricultural department said today. The state AAA was declared unconstitutional by Circuit Judge Winters in Multnomah county at the conclusion of a suit to restrain Fred Meyer, Portland chain store operator, from selling ice cream at a price less than the minimum provided in the code. The decision was appealed to the supreme court. Mickle said he had received inquiries from many milk dealers and producers as to what effect the court decision would have on the milk code.

BUTTER WEAKENS IN LATE SESSION

PORTLAND, Aug. 8.—(AP) There was a general abatement of weakness in the butter trade today during the late session of the Portland produce exchange. There has during the last few days been practically no speculative interest and while top scores has not been in real surplus supply, the entire butter structure has suffered from weakness in the undercurrent. Butterfat values were generally steady with most local interests paying around 21c lb.

The Dalles Wants Aluminum Factory

THE DALLES, Ore., Aug. 8.—(AP)—If the Bohn Aluminum company of Detroit builds an Oregon plant on the Columbia river as its president has proposed, this city wants it. A telegram was sent last night to Charles B. Bohn, president of the large manufacturing company, citing that a large and suitable area is available here. The chamber of commerce, sponsoring the invitation, pointed out that the Dalles, when the Bonneville dam is completed and the Columbia dredged between Vancouver and the dam, will be served by ocean-going vessels.

Dramatic Adventure Film On Craterian Screen

One of the most gasp-arousing scenes ever filmed in a moving picture takes place in "She," screen version of H. Rider Haggard's famed adventure romance. Randolph Scott, Helen Mack and Nigel Bruce are pursued by maddened soldiers who are dropped to their doom when the balancing rock turns over and spills their enemies to the depths below. Helen Gahagan plays the title role of "She," deathless queen of Kor in this spectacular story of a strange land where a group of women had discovered the secret of eternal youth. Gripping Drama On Rialto Friday Bill

Police guns will blaze across the screen as background for a new type of rapid-fire romance in "Behind the Green Light" a tale of police stations and law courts, playing at the Rialto theater tomorrow and Saturday.

This tense drama, suggested by the book by Capt. C. W. Williams of the New York police, assertedly gives the actual inside story on police efforts to combat a ring of jewel thieves and the crooked lawyers who defend them. The lively romance furnished by Norman Foster and lovely Judith Allen, playing a smart young detective and an ambitious woman lawyer, respectively, is described as rising to a stirring climax when their careers clash to make them professional rivals as well as sweethearts.
