

MORE WAR COMING WARNS AIR CHIEF IN BANQUET TALK

Next Conflict Will Come Suddenly Declares Col. Tinker—Medford Hospitality, Cooperation Lauded

"The world is going to have another war, whether it wants to or not, regardless of our last efforts in the 'war to end war,'" said Col. C. L. Tinker, commanding officer of the air corps at Hamilton field, in an address at the Hotel Medford last night...

"Peace won't exist—can't exist, until the human mind is trained, until there is no longer a need for civil or world courts. That condition hasn't existed yet, and probably will not exist for some time. That is why we (the bombing squadron) are here. We're here as government insurance, to protect the lives and property of our citizens," the colonel said.

In reviewing the possibility of the next war, Colonel Tinker said that it will not be preceded by long diplomatic harangues. "We'll know the next war is here when bombs drop out of the air on San Francisco—or on Tokio or Paris. We'll be ready when the clock strikes. Then is when we, the army men, will pay off the dividends on the insurance you citizens have been buying for so many years."

The colonel, dressed in smart civilian grey instead of the customary uniform of his rank, went on to deplore the present war-like attitude in Europe, and verbally frowned upon any suggestion that this country should ever participate in a war of invasion. But, he pointed out, this is the richest country in the world, in raw materials and commodities, and other world powers are covetous. That, he said, is why we must be prepared.

The serious side of his nature was not the only one that he revealed and in response to the toast of Wm. Bolger as toastmaster, delighted his audience with well chosen words of humor, and in thanking the people of Medford for what he termed his splendid reception here.

Hospitality Praised "I have been many places," he said, "and I have been to many gatherings in many towns, but never have I found the universal accord between the civilian and the army men that I have found in Medford. My men and I will always have a warm spot in our hearts for this city, and that is not a figure of speech. I mean it sincerely. I want particularly to extend thanks to the Chamber of Commerce, the mayor, the people, and to the CCC officers."

Toastmaster Bolger introduced Majors Myers, Smith and Dunoon, and Capt. Ernest W. Gruhn, the latter responding for Major Owen, who was unable to be present to represent the civilian conservation corps, being out on an inspection trip.

Sing Bombers Song At the special request of Colonel Tinker, the bombardment officers sang their "bombers" song, led by "Dinky" Moore, James Stevens, accompanied by Sebastian Apollo at the piano, sang three numbers with such deafening applause that he would have needed to sing all night to satisfy the room. His "Budgy, Can You Spare a Dime" was particularly well received.

Sebastian Apollo also received thunderous applause for his three selections, and during his rendition of "The Music Box" not another sound was to be heard in the large banquet hall so great was the attention.

Raymond Simpson, CCC enrollee, held the audience spellbound with his two violin numbers, playing "Sweet Mystery of Life" as an encore.

After the program the entire company adjourned to the Armory to witness the wrestling matches.
