

HOOVER REFUTED BY HIS OWN WORDS AVERS DEMOCRAT

Charge That Rooseveltian Policies Trample Primary Liberties of the People Hit by Senator Duffy

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 23.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover's own words were recalled today by an administration spokesman to refute the former president's recent assertion that Rooseveltian policies of the last two years had "trampled upon" the "primary liberties of the people."

In the first reply of a Democratic leader to Hoover's recent denunciation of the new deal, Senator Duffy, today delegates to the Young Democratic convention that the new deal policies were mild in comparison with those advocated by Hoover in time of emergency.

Testimony Quoted. Reading from Hoover's testimony before the house military affairs committee in 1924, when a bill concerning war policies was under consideration, Duffy quoted Hoover as having said:

"I would also suggest that from a legal point of view a general clause should be added to the bill giving blanket authority to the president to fix prices, wages, transportation charges, compensations, embargoes and imports and exports."

Hoover, he said, always "regarded the depression as a war," and pronounced the economic situation as "a greater crisis than war" in his 1932 campaign for re-election.

He listed legislative accomplishments of the administration, and challenged Republicans critics of the new deal to state what they would have done and to say which of the "major legislative acts of the administration" they would erase from the statute books.

Duffy, who was asked by President Roosevelt to address the convention bore a message from the latter regarding his inability to be present.

Says Hoover Candidate. Referring to Hoover as a candidate for president, Duffy said Hoover had asked "unlimited despotic power in a time of national emergency."

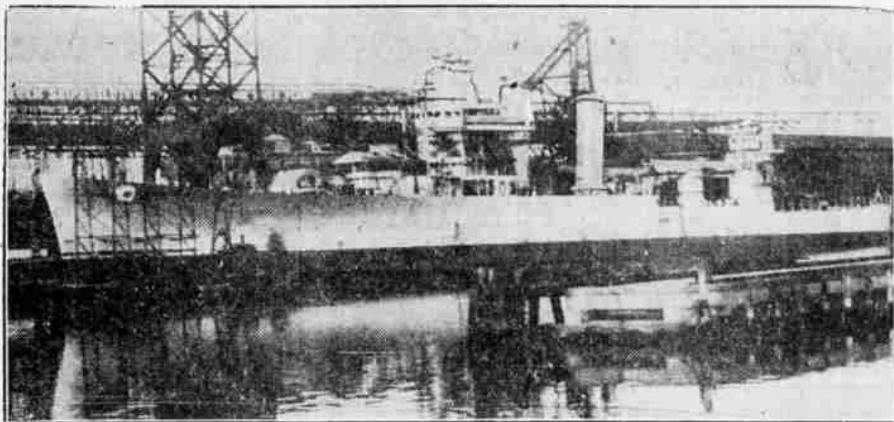

"It all depends," Duffy said, "upon whose baby has the measles. Ten years ago, when the party was in power, and when he expected to be Mr. Coolidge's successor to the presidency, he was all for giving the president unlimited power in an emergency."

"It was not a question with him merely of the institution of codes for business, or the limitation of prices for the farmers' products; it was not merely a matter of getting industries to agree to a living wage and limitation of the hours of labor in order that more people might be employed; it was not merely the question of abolishing child labor and sweat shop conditions, but Mr. Hoover was asking for the absolute suspension of every such guarantee of liberty as the writ of habeas corpus."

Roosevelt Inspired. Since March 4, 1933, Duffy said, "this nation has had an inspired leadership. A great humane program of recovery has been successfully undertaken. We can all be justly proud of the accomplishments of our administration."

He read the following greeting from President Roosevelt: "August 19, 1935. The White House, Washington. Dear Ryan: Please convey my best wishes to the Young Democrats' convention."

and say to those present that I had hoped up to the last minute to be able to visit Milwaukee with them. The simple truth is that the pressing of public business, resulting largely from the approaching adjournment of congress, makes it impossible for me to leave Washington at this time.

"While circumstances combine to keep me here in Washington, it is with some degree of satisfaction that I find it will be possible for me to address the convention over the radio. Arrangements have been completed for me to speak from the White House study Saturday evening at 9:30 Washington time.

"I fully realize and appreciate the significance of the Young Democrats' gathering in Milwaukee. Youth is the period of progress through action and I shall be mindful Saturday night as I talk to them that they are firm in the faith that the purpose of government must ever be the welfare of all the people. I am grateful to you for this service."

"Very sincerely yours. (Signed) FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

PAUL BUNYAN BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION ATTRACTS CROWD AT MARSHFIELD

MARSHFIELD, Ore., Aug. 23.—(AP)—A chapter drawn from the ages of the Pacific Northwest was revived here today when state officials and thousands of southern Oregon residents arrived to pay homage to the mythical hero of all loggers—Paul Bunyan.

An old-fashioned dress parade and a whicker carnival comprised the preliminary events at the observance yesterday.

Governor Charles H. Martin headed the delegation from Oregon's state capitol which attended speedboat races, marine parades, water "free-for-all," coastguard drills and boxing matches on today's program.

The celebration is to last through Sunday.

"Paul Bunyan's birthday" was the name given the first annual observance last year when one of the largest crowds ever assembled on Coos bay witnessed the four-day event.

The celebration was fostered by the Lions' club as a means to raise funds with which to purchase playground equipment for the new city park, deemed one of the most picturesque in the state.

Governor Martin was scheduled to speak late today at a dedication of the park when it will formally receive the name of the storied person whose renown resulted in its completion—Paul Bunyan.
