as an effort to make the question international instead of individual. The war office announced today the fixed defenses at Aden, Arabia, as well as at Malta, would be brought up to strength already approved.

Confirming that Malta and Aden defenses would be reinforced with units of royal artillery engineers and signal corps, the war office, however, specified these were the only moves to be made now.

The war office announcement came as the question of colonial possession among the great powers, quasi-dormant since the treaty of Versailles, assumed greater proportions and repercussions from the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

In Germany, advices said, Dr. Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior, made it clear that the German "crash" while "need" for colonies was fast developing into Germany's "demand." He was reported to have said that when the question of revision of colonial questions was discussed internationally, Germany would not be satisfied to allow her expansion desires to be ignored.

The British war office has ordered 1200 troops to embark in the steamer Nevalia from Southampton to Malta in the next few days to reinforce garrisons at British key points in the Mediterranean.

Spain, as well as Britain, is worried about her colonial possessions in Africa. Spain fears an uprising of Moroccan tribesmen may result from the general anti-European feeling in sympathy with Ethiopia. Spain has reinforced its Gibraltar garrison and placed dumps of munitions there ready for speedy transport to Spanish Morocco.

The London Daily Post today, under the heading, "America Passes By," lashes out at the United States neutrality bill, saying: "Ever since the days of Napoleon the United States policy has insisted on the freedom of the seas with frequently embarrassing emphasis."

Now all of a sudden she has veered to the opposite extreme. "Wasn't America one of the signatories of the peace treaties? Wasn't it the American secretary of state (Frank B. Kellogg) who instigated the so-called peace pact? Having undertaken interventions of this kind, can she legitimately disclaim all responsibility for the consequences? There may well come a turn of events which will presently compel America to abandon her mode of exaggerated isolationism."
