Ye Smudge Pot By Arthur Perry Owing to the high price of bacon, the old-fashioned colt that formerly resembled a deer, is spotted by a hog, when hunting starts this fall.

The United States government, in a surprising display of gumption, has nothing to do with the voting next year, threatens the Soviet government of Soviet Russia with drastic action, because of revolutionary speeches, made at the "Third International" at Moscow, by American Reds.

"FARMERS LAUDED FOR SUCCESSFUL CROPS" (Blakely News) A snub for Mother Nature, and the farmer's oldest boy, who did the spring plowing.

MOVIE QUEEN The gold that glides the gorgeous sun Into your shining hair was spun: The blue that tints the azure skies— From it were made your lovely eyes. And then—a vacuum out of space— It's where your brain should be in place.

A lady reader of the Oregonian writes to the editor complaining that "boys of high school age, deliberately, smash, snare, and whittle the park benches." She desires to know if something cannot be done to stop this crime-breeding practice.

THE BRONE It's seldom that death designs to take a fool. But here is one who at all times would sleep. He leaves no flocks of fine Merino sheep And never owned a single clip of wool.

Huey,—"Friend of the People!"

HUEY LONG'S stock in trade is his professed devotion to the people, and his interest in the welfare of the common man.

Those who KNOW Huey, know this is a lot of hokum and nothing else. Huey is devoted to no one but himself, and interested in nothing but what will benefit the Louisiana Kingfish, politically, or contribute to his inflated ego, and "will to power."

Adroit opportunist, and unprincipled demagogue that he is, Huey Long however, has been able to get away with it, particularly in his own state of Louisiana; and has also made amazing progress throughout the country.

In view of his exhibition in the senate last night, when conducting a filibuster, he was able to defeat the appropriation bill designed to finance the administration's social security and industrial reform program, one wonders how long he will be able to fool "some of the people all the TIME."

THE administration's program was designed solely to benefit the people of this country,—the rank and file, the forgotten man,—and was fought by big business and the vested interests, with every resource at their command.

The appropriation bill Long defeated was designed to finance pensions for the helpless and the aged; greater security and well being for the workers in our coal fields; protection for those who place their savings in stocks or bonds, against the depredations of the stock jugglers and profiteers;—in short a sincere and thorough-going effort to improve the lot of the common man.

BUT did this great champion of the people, support this measure? He did not. He not only didn't support it, he took advantage of the most abused and undemocratic privilege in the senate, the "one-man filibuster" to defeat it.

Why? Simply because he HATES Roosevelt. Simply because he would rather see every worthy effort to improve the lot of the average man in this country defeated, than have any credit for accomplishment go to the man who dared to challenge his own dictatorship in Louisiana, or place any obstacles in his rise to power.

"RULE or ruin", that is the real Long slogan, and the only constant factor in his sensational and entirely selfish political career.

This filibuster on the deficiency appropriation bill shows it more clearly, perhaps, than any other of his political acts, during the past few years.

But we are not so sure it will contribute materially to a clarification of the political atmosphere as far as the Kingfish is concerned.

Unprincipled, ruthless, vindictive, completely insincere,—Huey nevertheless is a master show man, and a rabble rouser and table thumper, in perhaps without a peer.

Eventually, of course, he will meet the fate that demagogues and four-flushers always meet,—but we wouldn't advise anyone to bank too much on its being soon.

Huey Long's career, as we see it, is a sort of endurance contest between two American concepts,—"you can't fool all the people all the time"; and "a snucker is born every minute." The former is sure to win; but it promises to take far too long a time.

WELL, those who opposed the recognition of Soviet Russia, win. All they claimed when the matter was broached, has been sustained.

Some, of course, opposed recognition on the narrow ground, that to recognize a communistic form of government would be wrong.

This was not the contention of the majority. It was admitted that Russia had as much right to establish a communistic form of government, as Italy to establish a fascist form, or the United States a democratic form.

That wasn't the point. The point was that Soviet Russia, was neither a friendly, nor an honest nation. It was committed to a policy of world wide revolution, and its promises to the contrary could not be depended upon.

Nor could its promises of increased trade with this country be taken at their face value. This was merely molasses to catch flies. There would be no more trade with recognition, than without it.

And regardless of what Moscow said about paying its debts to this country, they would never be paid, without some "quid pro quo" which no self respecting government could grant.

WELL, there's the record, precisely as predicted. There has been NO increased trade with Russia; the war debts have NOT been paid; the promises of the Soviet government to no longer meddle in U. S. affairs, have NOT been kept; and the records show that Stalin and his gang of freebooters are as much interested in an uprising of the world proletariat as they ever were.

That sharp note from the Roosevelt administration was all to the good, and straight to the point. Undoubtedly the Soviet government will come back in a conciliatory fashion, and again disavow any intention of inciting revolution or interfering with the internal affairs of this or any other country.

But who can place any faith in such protestations? The burden of proof this time certainly rests on the shoulders of those who maintained Soviet Russia could be trusted BEFORE.

In lieu of such evidence it is the belief of this newspaper, that the sooner diplomatic relations between this country and the present dictatorship in Russia are broken off, the better for all concerned.

ALL THE NEW R-DIABETICS

Diabetes is a nutritional disease, a fault of metabolism, inability to utilize normally various food substances, particularly carbohydrates—sugars and starches. As the body is unable to use it, sugar accumulates in the blood, and some of it overflows thru the kidneys, producing the characteristic glycosuria or glucose (sugar) in the urine.

Apparatus diabetes is more prevalent today than ever before. This may be explained by the fact that it is a disease of mature adults chiefly, and more persons attain mature or middle age today than in earlier times—that is, the expectation of life is steadily rising, thanks to medical science and gradual enlightenment of the people in matters of hygiene and sanitation—so that more people have opportunity to be exposed to the causes of diabetes. While a young child may have diabetes, the great majority of cases occur in persons from 40 to 60 years of age. For this reason we regard diabetes as one of the degenerative diseases which develop at the time of life when one should be at his best.

In considering what the authorities have to say about the cause or causes of diabetes one cannot help thinking that one has heard it all before. Yes, to be sure, the same general etiology has been applied to the problem of arteriosclerosis, heart disease, Bright's disease, apoplexy or what have you, the word, when it is all the same. This does not imply that it is all the same. For all we know it may be as true for diabetes as it is for CVD (cardiovascular degeneration, heart-artery wearing out). Not that it matters, but my own opinion is that.

Diabetes is a nutritional disease, a fault of metabolism, inability to utilize normally various food substances, particularly— Well, hum, maybe you've heard this before, too. What I'm driving at is the simple concept that the essential cause of diabetes is nutritional deficiency, and such factors as "nervous strain," infection, heredity, or pancreatic injury are comparatively unimportant.

with many other people. When they heard I was from the west, they all wanted to know something about the west, when I told them I was from Oregon they gave me the "horse laugh" and wanted to know where in the western jungles Oregon was?

I bought some fruit in Washington and gave the man a ten dollar gold piece. He gave me in change some silver and nine one dollar bills, saying "You are from the west, how far from Chicago?" I said "And then some."

"Well, where are you from?" I told him I was from Oregon and he said, "Where the heck is Oregon? I never heard of it. I never knew Oregon was on the map."

So I don't believe Oregon gets the advertising that some other states get. BARNEY CODY, Jacksonville, Ore. A native son of the west and a pioneer of Oregon of 1863.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Sidney Franklin, Brooklyn bull fighter, is returning to the rings of Spain and Mexico shortly after being out of commission for 18 months as a result of a goring. Franklin made the mistake of turning his back on a dying bull after the death thrust and was flung 30 feet.

Soft voiced, indeed almost feminine, Franklin is a strange combination of mauler and aesthete. He is enthralled by the excitement of the bull ring and equally entranced by the gorgeous colorings of his costumes, which he designs. He paints, is expert at leather punching and has mastered 10 Spanish dialects.

Despite a sensitiveness, he is caloused to the cry of cruelty in bull fighting. He says the fatal thrust is far less painful and more humane than the methods of the packers. Bulls, he declares, are edged to fight by hundreds of years of expert breeding. And love it even unto "death in the afternoon."

Franklin has the actor's reticence about age. Some say he is in early 30's. He says 29. He has purchased a large cattle ranch in Mexico with his earnings that sometimes reach $100,000 a year. He will fight for two more years and retire to this ranch.

One of Franklin's intimates is another of America's reckless adventurers, the Denver-born Eddie Egan, who literally fought his way around the world as an amateur boxer, won a Rhodes scholarship and is now an assistant U. S. district attorney with a fixed annuity income as a criminal lawyer. Among intimates and in a relaxing mood, Egan and Franklin sometimes stage a burlesque bull fight with Egan as the bull and Franklin as the matador. A climax in parlor dances.

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

WAR news: Britain's powerful imperial committee, working speedily upon cabinet instructions in view of the war clouds in East Africa, began the reallocation of British fighting forces along the vital points likely to be affected by a war. Sounds as if Britain means business.

ONE of these vital points, incidentally, is likely to be the Suez canal. Closing the Suez canal to his troop and supply ships would make it embarrassing for Mussolini.

NEAR war news: A giant German air cruiser is reported to have crashed during the Baltic maneuvers of August 4, causing death to an undetermined number of persons.

The interesting part of this news is that the reportedly destroyed air cruiser carried four 7.7 centimeter cannons (7.7 centimeters are roughly three inches) 24 heavy machine guns and several tons of bombs. It was manned by a first officer, two pilots, one radioman, four mechanics, one artillery officer, eight artillerymen, 24 machine gunners and eight sailors.

If Germany has any more of these flying fortresses, she can hardly be said to be unarmed, can she?

POLITICAL news: Democrats use Hoover's own words to refute his charges that Roosevelt politicians of the past two years have "trampled upon the primary liberties of the people." They assert that back in 1924, when testifying on a bill concerning war policies, he said:

"I would also suggest that from a legal point of view a general clause should be added to the bill giving blanket authority to the President to fix prices, wages, transportation charges, compensations and embargoes on imports and exports."

THAT statement, of course, referred to war, but these Democratic critics claim that Hoover always regarded the depression as closely akin to war, so what he said about one should apply to the other.

Either far fetched, most of us will say, but at least it proves that if public men want to stay out of trouble they'd better NEVER SAY ANYTHING.

MORE political news—or anyway political propaganda: Young Republicans, meeting at Yellowstone park, are told by Edward L. Shattuck, of Los Angeles, that "only a determined type of crusade can wrest victory away from the New Deal in 1936."

Shucks! A plain, common change of mind on the part of American voters can go farther in that direction than all the crusades ever launched. And it is a lot more likely to happen.

AND now a bit of news about a smart man who lives up in Alaska: H. A. Anderson had hens' eggs, but no setting hens or incubator. So he rowed his eggs out to an island where the cormorants nest, put them under the cormorants and at the proper time he rowed back to the island and picked up a basketful of newly hatched chicks. Men with smart brains like that are worth more to a country than all the war-makers, diplomats and politicians who crash the headlines in a year.
