CAREER IN NAVY HAS ADVANTAGES SAYS RECRUITER

Training in Trade, Free Clothing, Medical Care—Retirement With Pension Among Opportunities Seen

Gerald Critchlow of Phoenix, A. W. Limbeck of Central Point, and J. R. Tugate of Butte Falls, who enlisted in the navy at Portland May 14, 1935, are now at home enjoying 10 days' leave, having completed their three months' preliminary training at the training station, San Diego, Calif. Upon reporting back to the training station they will be assigned to one of the ships of the fleet, where their navy life aboard ship will begin.

According to Chief Petty Officer E. M. West, on recruiting duty here, one of the boys intends to remain in the navy and the recruiter points out the following inducements in such a career:

"The navy sets no limits to the heights a man might reach, either in education or in a trade. Most all trades in commercial practice are used aboard a modern ship of war. These trades are efficiently piloted by navy-trained men taken from civilian life as novices and trained with care to become experts. This training is done in one of the many trade schools maintained by the navy, or it is given aboard ship through the medium of a navy trade or training course. If after an honorable term of enlistment, he wishes to leave the service he leaves as a trained and skilled craftsman, or, if he wishes to remain in the service he may climb still further up the ladder of success.

"The navy man has the advantage of good pay. He has nothing to buy, except a few clothes to replenish his wardrobe. There is good wholesome food prepared by skilled cooks under sanitary conditions. A complete outfit of clothing and bedding is furnished free and with proper care should last for years. With proper budgeting and a little thrift, there is no reason why any man in the naval service cannot save part of his pay.

"Enlisted doctors and surgeons, dentists, pharmacists and nurses, located aboard ship and at hospitals ashore, are constantly on duty, not only to care for, but to prevent sickness and epidemics. All medical, surgical and dental attention is free.

"From the time a man enters until his enlistment is completed, or he reenlists, he is under instruction in one way or another, because the navy is advancing along with other walks of life. Each recruit is given a 12 weeks' course of preliminary training, covering drills of various sorts, including infantry drill under arms, seamanship, personal cleanliness, discipline, signals or different kinds of work.

"After a man who has served his country in the navy for 20 years has enjoyed life to its utmost, he has rubbed shoulders with people from all over the world, traveled to many different countries, received good pay, and learned a trade. He has not had to deny himself in order to amass that neat egg against old age. His 20 years of faithful and honorable service in the navy has assured him of an income for the rest of his life. It is the navy's reward for faithfulness and honorable service to his country—retirement with a pension."
