Golf Is Like That, to Be Sure

But the "Cinderella" Story of Ray Billows Rates Niche in Folklore

NEW YORK—(AP)—Golf is like that, to be sure.

Especially "like that" is golf in state amateur tournaments, where kids from farms and factories are forever rattling up in collegiately-derelet flippers and beating the socks off the maitre d' darlings of the country club set.

But even so the amazing victory of 21-year-old Ray Billows—a Racine, Wis., boy recently transplanted to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., by the printing firm for which he bills involuntarily at $11 a week—in the New York state amateur, carried a "Cinderella" angle that has unquestionably earned it a niche in domestic sporting folklore.

To win the championship Billows climaxed a week of fisticomic performances by overcoming a four-down-at-the-29th-hole deficit and winning out on the 37th hole over Jack Creary of Albany, who a week before had won the state junior title.

Does Things To His Gallery

To add to the Ralph Henry Harbour college-football-hero touch that his story seemed to warrant, whooping, exultant caddies of the snooty Winged Foot club hoisted the champion to their shoulders and bore him the couple of furlongs back to the clubhouse after that final putt dropped to make the dream come true.

The ebullient Mr. Billows did things to his golf gallery. Not only the caddies, but everyone following the final round match in a drenching rain seemed to have been caught up in a sort of sporting fever rarely found in polite golf galleries, which usually spatter their applause quite impartially and to a large extent, impersonally.

But they all knew Ray's story—a personable lad only eight months out of the University of Wisconsin, had run down from his home in St. Paul with just barely enough money to eat on, intending to do without a caddy, even, and had spent one night sleepless in his jellophy before a moneyed Winged Footer rescued him and there after sponsored him. And they all, well, almost all—were rooting for him against his 19-year-old rival with far more apparent favoritism than you usually find in a polite golf match.

... the caddies gave it the college-football-hero touch.

The Crowd Was Fickled

When Ray squared that final match with a par four on the 35th hole the fans went rushing for the 18th green, grinning broadly and patting each other on the back, the way a crowd does when it's tickled. Billows beat some pretty good golfers en route to his title. Charles C. Pettibohn, Jr., was his first victim, and he won that one, too, with a late rush after being two down with five to play. George Voigt, former Walker cup star, T. Sufferin' Tomler, millionaire dilettante linkman, and Willie Turnesa of the many golfing Turnesa and daughter, Sybil, returned August 21 from a delightful two-weeks' vacation trip which took them to the Yellowstone park via Lakeview and John Day, Ore., and Boise and Pocatello, Idaho. They returned through Gardiner, Mont., west to Spokane, and at Seattle visited their sister and friends in Portland and made short stops at towns on the Pacific highway for visits.

Madames Guetzlaff, Wahl, Lance and Effie Birdseye attended the given-well party and kitchen shower given by the Civic Improvement club and Ladies Aid of Rogue River for Mrs. Victor Birdseye at the home of Mrs. T. Galliger August 23. The club also presented Mrs. Cloyd Dix, who had been president of the club several years, with a china tea set. A most delightful afternoon was spent and many lovely and useful gifts were received by Mrs. Birdseye. About 36 ladies were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Lance left August 21 for Marshfield, where they will spend the next ten days. Mrs. Pauline Wahl called on Mrs. George Stead, August 21.

Mrs. Beth Brown returned August 23 from a several weeks' visit with relatives in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles McMerriek and children, Alice and George, returned August 23 from a several month stay in California. At San Diego they visited J. A. McMerriek's mother and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Thorn, and Mr. and Mrs. Max Beswick at Los Angeles, who formerly resided at the Pickett auto camp.

Thomas Adams of Trail Creek was at visitor at the Lance mine August 22.

Lloyd Miller, M. Boomalter and George Lance and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Guetzlaff and son, Frederick, spent August 21 in Medford.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cook of Gold Hill spent Thursday evening with Mrs. Pauline Wahl and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Elliott.

Mrs. Tuttle of Nevada arrived August 23 to spend the next two weeks with her son at the Maybell mine.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hull and daughter, Georgann, of Salem, who have been visiting their aunt, Mrs. A. D. Stearns of Ashland, visited at the home of their uncle, George Lance, August 26.

S. W. Hutchinson and Geo. Weeks were in Medford on business August 27.

Rev. and Mrs. Wadsworth returned to their home in Hollywood August 27 after spending several weeks at Sunset on the Rogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Tucker of Medford spent August 25 visiting his parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Yancey and son, Bob, and Mrs. Alma Merriman and son, Ray, all visited at the S. W. Hutchinson home Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Bertha Evans and brother, Denny Zimmerman, of Hood River arrived here August 23 to be near their mother, Mrs. Marina Zimmerman, who is very ill.

Half Menace to Life

CONNELLY, O.—(UP)—Condemned as a menace to the safety of Conneaut children, an old raft has been ordered destroyed. The raft already had been blamed for the drowning of two boys.

Drainage from burned-over areas kills fish and spoils trout streams. An average of 400,000 acres of good hunting and fishing country in Washington and Oregon burns over every year. Fire is the great destroyer of fish and game. Let's be careful with fire.

EYE WORK WITH MIXED EMOTIONS

Elated by Approval Coulee Project—Disappointed by Failure of Flood Control Measure to Pass

By H. C. Hunter Associated Press Northwest Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(P)—Disappointment and elation were thoroughly mixed for members of congress from Washington, Oregon and Idaho as the session slowly faded into history.

They were elated over the victory in which the $13,000,000 Grand Coulee project, on the Columbia river in central Washington, gained congressional approval while there was disappointment that the huge flood control authorization measure, which would have given permission for wide-spread spending of upwards of $500,000,000, as amended in the senate, fell by the wayside.

The flood control measure carried approximately $14,000,000 for flood control work in Washington state and along the Columbia river in Washington and Oregon. The measure had the support of Oregon's two republican senators, James W. Mott, of Salem, and William A. Exwell, of Portland, but was opposed by the democratic member from that state, Walter M. Pierce, of La Grande.

Potato Measure Passes

Among other legislation of great interest to the three Pacific northwest states was the Columbia valley authority bill, the bill of Sen. James A. Pope, Idaho democrat, for amending the mining industry, the potato measure, making that farm product a basic commodity under the AAA. The measure making it mandatory for the forest service to construct roads to mining areas which showed potentialities of becoming paying regions and the measure for distributing power from the Bonneville project, on the Columbia river between Washington and Oregon.

Only the measure affecting potatoes was able to survive through to the end and that had a close call in the senate, where both opponents and proponents fought bitterly for support as the vote neared.

C. V. A. Hits Snag

The Columbia valley authority measure struck an snag when President Roosevelt counseled Pope, who introduced one of the several measures which made their appearance from time to time, that both the Bonneville and Grand Coulee should be completed by the agencies which started their construction before central control was undertaken. This measure, however, did not have the support of the interested delegations. Sen. Frederick Steiwer, Oregon republican, turned thumbs down, saying it would be a handicap to Bonneville. Sen. Charles McNary, Oregon republican, favored the CVA, while favoring an authority, Sen. Homer T. Bone, Washington democrat, looked on the measure as inadequate. His views were reflected by Sen. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Bone's colleague.

Pope's mining bill, which would have authorized the federal government through the bureau of mines, to furnish funds for mining projects and to have entered mining fields and developed new properties as an aid to the relief of unemployment, was passed over in the senate while Pope was in Europe.

The measure of Rep. Compton L. White, Clarkston, Idaho, democrat, making it mandatory for the forest service to construct roads into mining areas likewise fell by the wayside so far as congressional action was concerned. White, however, carried his fight to the public works administration, and obtained a vote from President Roosevelt that he believed a $5,000,000 allocation, requested by the forest service, would be approved.

Wayne Ash, Albert Johnson and Jimmie Hughes were week-end visitors here at the home of Wayne's mother, Mrs. Francis Ash. They and Mrs. Laurabel LaDieu visited Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ash Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter of Medford were week-end guests at the home of Mrs. Porter's brother, Bill Burk. Mrs. Burk accompanied them home Sunday evening.
