PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 30.—(AP)—Representative James W. Mott returned from Washington today and was greeted here by his wife and children who accompanied him on to his home in Salem.

About half the time Mott supported administration in congress, he said. "No one knows," he replied when asked if the country is any better off now than before congress convened.

"Some good legislation was passed and some bad legislation went along with it. There are still 10,000,000 people unemployed and 30,000,000 people on relief."

He said he voted for many democratic bills because they were the only bills about the subject on which congress would have a chance to act. Some administration measures as amended by congress, turned out to be good bills, he said.

He changed the gag rule was used to put through much legislation, with debate limited or shut off.

RECTOR'S SON TO DELIVER SUNDAY ST. MARKS SERMON

The congregation of St. Mark's Episcopal church will have the pleasure of listening to a sermon delivered by the son of the present rector at the 11 o'clock services next Sunday morning.

Rev. E. P. Bartlam, assistant rector of Trinity church at Houston, Texas, son of Rev. E. S. Bartlam of St. Mark's of Medford, accompanied by his wife, arrived here two weeks ago by auto for a short visit with the young rector's parents, and being prevailed upon to deliver a sermon from his father's pulpit, has accepted the invitation.

The young Bartlams, married but 12 weeks, are ready on their honeymoon trip. Enroute from Houston they have visited many points in northern Texas, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho and Oregon. During the two weeks they have been here the young rector and his wife have become very popular and have been honor guests on a trip to Crater lake and at several dinners. They will start on their return trip to Houston Monday morning, going by the way of Sacramento and Los Angeles, where they will make short visits.

GHELARDI JOINS GONZAGA SQUAD

"Leapin' Leo" Ghelardi, the volatile spark of last year's Medford high school football team, and Dick Lewis are leaving tomorrow morning for Spokane, where they will enter Gonzaga university to start football practice. Head coach Mike Pecaravich of Gonzaga was in Medford a few days ago conferring with the two, and with Ronald Baker and Lloyd Hammack.

Hammack was to have gone north with Ghelardi and Lewis tomorrow but due to a broken toe recently sustained he will not be able to join the others until later. Baker has not yet decided whether he will attend Gonzaga or Willamette university. It was learned today.

Ghelardi is rated as one of the finest small backfield men ever to play for the local high school. Although he weighs only 140 pounds, he is fast and a tricky runner. His long passes, and his thrilling punt returns last year were the feature of every game. Many of the down-town quarters consider "Leapin' Leo" too small for college football, but Pecaravich evidently thinks otherwise. The Gonzaga mentor pointed out that the mainstay of the University of San Francisco three years ago, Tony Donadio, was about the same size as Ghelardi, and was a hair-shirt for nearly every large California school all season.

Lewis is better known for his baseball and basketball playing than for football, but those who have seen him play with independent eleven proclaim him a remarkable ball carrier and blocker, with a dazzling right hand pass.

Hammack was regular center for the Medford high school for three years, and was also a star basketball center. Both he and Lewis have been members of the St. Mary's All-Star basketball team for the past two years. Ghelardi played basketball with that outfit last year.
